Why should you send your film to... "The Film Doctors"?

TO REDUCE FILM COSTS DRASTICALLY . . .

If you have films in your library that must be "junked" because they are scratched, dirty or damaged in some way—here's a guaranteed solution! Have your prints RAPIDWELD-ed by "The Film Doctors"—cleaned, scratches removed and damages repaired. They come back like new . . . and at a fraction of the replacement cost you now face.

TO MAKE YOUR PRINTS LAST FOREVER . . .

If you have new film in your library that you know will be damaged (scratched) from even the most normal usage—have them RAPIDTREAT-ed by "The Film Doctors" with an inexpensive, protective coating. Your film will resist scratches and stay like new despite repeated handling.

TO SOLVE YOUR FILM PROBLEMS . . .

Whether laboratory, film producer, library, television studio, educational institution or industrial film user, "The Film Doctors" in their modern new laboratory can restore your prints to original screening quality, and then preserve that quality for years.

PLATITUDE CHALLENGED

By JAMES MORRIS
Equipment Editor, THE FILM DAILY

THE MOST FREQUENTLY OFFERED PANACEA for the ailments of the motion picture exhibition industry is contained in the familiar remark: "There's nothing wrong with the business that good pictures won't cure." A sharp challenge to this glib platitude was delivered last year in the hearing of this reporter by one equipment manufacturer. Although certainly in favor of as many good pictures as possible, he declared the remark quoted above to be the "silliest statement ever made."

It was evident during 1957 that ideas such as "good pictures are enough" were being finally laid to rest. Although leaders in the exhibition field called for more pictures and better pictures, and pictures catering to the large teen-age movie audience, they were also turning more and more to new and improved exhibition methods to attract the public.

MORRIS

New and improved exhibition methods include roadshow presentation and the conversion of older neighborhood houses to small but de luxe theatres equipped to provide a quality screen image and comfortable and attractive surroundings to showcase quality films.

The success last year of such roadshow reelases as "Around the World in 80 Days" and "The Ten Commandments" was dependent both on the high quality of the pictures and on specially equipped theatres —one ingredient wasn't enough.

The roadshow theatre employs the biggest screen possible and the finest sound system available. It may enhance its screen image through the use of wide-gauge Todd-AO film. Every seat in the house should be a good one, and the seats must be comfortable. Overall, the equipment of the roadshow theatre and the behavior of its personnel are expected to create an atmosphere that combines the dignity of the legitimate theatre with the spectacular impact and streamlined comfort now possible with the best modern theatre equipment.

The successful roadshow house is not usually a large one and it is not necessarily located in the center of town, but it is geared to long and profitable two-a-day, hard-ticket runs at advanced prices, benefiting by public interest that builds up through word-of-mouth publicity.

De luxe neighborhood houses that often supplement the latest Hollywood fare with a selection of the best films from overseas are usually the result of complete remodeling jobs on older theatres that could no longer make the grade. Needless to say, imaginatively decorated lobbies and auditoriums, really comfortable seating, adequate washroom facilities and, most important, a quality screen image and sound should be characteristics of such theatres—characteristics that encourage patrons to get back into the movie-going habit.

DRIVE-INS ACTIVE

While the feverish pace of new drive-in construction slowed slightly last year, that field was by no means sinking into a slump. Quite the contrary. Many new drive-ins were opened and operators were exploiting some new ideas that are already getting strong public support.

One of the most important of these is the idea of combining drive-ins with extensive "kiddylands" or amusement parks in addition to the customary playgrounds that are invariably provided for small fry. An excellent example can be found at an elaborate new ozoner built by Loew's Theatres, in a suburb of Houston. A miniature railroad with 1,620 feet of track winds through fairy-tale panoramas along its right-of-way that almost rival the attractions at California's Disneyland.

Opposite in one sense from expanding drive-ins into the amusement park field is the idea worked out by Associated Prudential Theatres and Architect Drew Eberson for the indoor-outdoor "All-Weather" drive-in opened last Spring on Long Island.

The logic of the indoor-outdoor idea is explained by Eberson as follows: A good drive-in represents a large investment in land and equipment, but in most cases cannot be profitably operated for more than eight months of the year. However, adding an inclosed theatre at the center of the property guarantees all-year and all-weather operation. The indoor portion of the operation can be erected at very considerable savings, since central projection, concession, lavatory and parking facilities serve both.

Another big advantage, Eberson asserts, is that the public does not have to change its theatre-going habits with the approach of Winter or Spring. It patronizes the same installation all year round.

CABLE THEATRE

Any discussion of activities in the theatre equipment field during the past year would be grossly incomplete without mention of close-circuit pay-TV, familiarly known as the cable theatre. To say that this unproved idea is difficult to assess on the basis of the single test operation started in the late Summer of 1957 in Bartlesville, Okla., would be putting it mildly.

The situation was further complicated by the refusal of the government to come to grips with proposals for the authorization of tests of pay-TV over the air. Perhaps—but nobody was sure of this either in 1957—over-the-air toll broadcasts would make it economically impractical for exhibitors or others to sponsor local wire systems of the kind suggested by International Telemeter Corp., a subsidiary of Paramount Pictures.

An additional but often overlooked problem affecting future cable theatre possibilities is created by the failure of Congress and the Federal Communications Commission to formulate a final policy on another broadcasting need, provision of more channels for TV broadcasting through further utilization of the Ultra-High-Frequency (UHF) channels. The Very-High-Frequency (VHF) band, now almost exclusively employed for commercial TV can provide only a few channels in most broadcasting markets.

In this situation, scheduling of toll-TV broadcasts from present stations might well be considered to deprive the public of much of present free service. However, if expansion into the UHF band can bring an almost unlimited number of additional stations to every market, toll-TV might even be necessary to finance this expansion. Such a development would certainly affect any closed-circuit operations started at present.

In the meantime interested exhibitors are waiting to see which way the ball will bounce—all except one that is. Despite the unpredictable factors in the situation, Henry Griffing, president of Video Independent Theatres, inaugurated his cable theatre operation last September in Bartlesville.

When he began Griffing flatly stated that he did not expect over-night profit miracles. But the cable theatre service, which is available to about 4,500 Bartlesville families, had not by the end of the year lived up to Griffing's modest expectations. It is readily admitted by those concerned that the public is not quickly or easily convinced that it should pay for entertainment received over TV, even if the entertainment is the latest Hollywood product.

Out of the potential 4,500 subscribers in Bartlesville, about 500 signed up by the end of an initial heavy promotion. The number of subscribers is said to have reached a peak of nearly 700 subscribers somewhere in the late Fall or early Winter and then to have quickly slipped back to a low of about 300 early in 1958.

To counter public apathy, Video Independent Theatres has since established a minimum monthly charge approximately half the $9.50 per month first asked of subscribers for all programming. It has also been considering a metering system that will allow subscribers to pay for attractions on a par-program basis.

BRIGHTER SCREENS

In accordance with industry efforts to increase the present movie audience by constantly striving for better theatre presentation, projector and lamp manufacturers introduced some new products last year that are of particular value in obtaining bright, sharp screen images at both hardtop and drive-in theatres.

Among these products is the Strong "jet-arc" (a comparable lamp is also sold by National Theatre Supply), a new and powerful type of arc lamp adapted to theatre needs from the Gretener "blown" arc developed in Switzerland. Previously this type of lamp had been chiefly identified with the Eidophor experimental theatre-TV projector which requires an extremely powerful light source.

Another important product introduced last year is the curved projector gate which minimizes the fluttering and buckling of film under projection heat that often throws film out of focus.

Although none took place in the United States, demonstrations of semi-automatic theatre projection systems occurred during 1957 in England, Germany and Japan. Basically, all of these systems have in common some sort of electric cuing method that switches off one projector and starts the other at the end of a reel and which may strike an arc lamp automatically. Others involve the use of a Xenon gas arc in connection with the automatic changeover.

Since the still-experimental Xenon lamp uses no carbons and needs no adjustment during its life span, it may eventually find use in small theatres, particularly overseas, but its light output is considered inadequate for filling a wide screen in the average American indoor theatre.

SUBLIMINAL TESTS

Perhaps the most unusual theatre equipment development of 1957 was the attempt to make theatre screens a vehicle for "subliminal" advertising. Experiments with subliminal apparatus at a theatre in Fort Lee, N. J., involved superimposing an additional screen image carrying a simple advertising message over the feature presentation.

The superimposed projections were flashed on the screen so quickly and at such low light levels that they could not be seen consciously by an observer. Proponents of the system believe however that these projections make an unconscious impression on the viewer that can lead him to follow the advice in the message. Messages used in the test were "eat popcorn" and "drink Coca-Cola." While it has been established by scientists that subliminal messages can be unconsciously perceived to some extent, no one had been able to determine during 1957 if they are a useful advertising medium.

An article on 1957 equipment developments must make mention of the continued progress of the concession industry. In a time when many exhibitors were hard pressed, more efficient vending operations provided new sources of revenue. Theatre men who attended the various exhibitor trade shows during 1957 were aware of the vast variety of speedy and efficient vending apparatus available and the many tempting and easily served foods and drinks designed to attract the theatre patron.

All in all, 1957 was not a year of striking new developments in the theatre equipment field. It was instead a year when exhibitors worked to digest and exploit the developments of previous years while modernizing theatres to make a more effective pitch for the public's entertainment dollar.

SPRUCE UP YOUR CHAIRS
CUSTOM TAILORED SEAT BACKS
EASY TO INSTALL
SLIPS ON IN A JIFFY —
No Labor Costs

Made of Heavy Duty Long Wearing Upholstery Materials.

Our large stock enables us to match original factory fabrics. All seating colors in stock for prompt delivery. Our slip-on-seat backs do away with costly upholstering. Made in three styles—Snap Buttons—Tie Strings—Zippers. Priced from $1.85 ready for installation.

For pattern styles just trace back on heavy paper showing actual size and dimensions. Send sample of material for matching. A made-up cover will be mailed you for inspection and price given on quantity desired.

We also manufacture tailored seat covers for chair bottoms. A sewed cover made of a sturdy leatherette and corduroy in matching or contrasting color can be supplied for 90c each. Better fabrics slightly higher.

All Our Fabrics Sold by the Yard If You Prefer.

LEGISLATIVE RESTRICTIONS IN FOREIGN FILM MARKETS

By NATHAN D. GOLDEN

Director, Scientific Motion Picture & Photographic Products Division
Business and Defense Services Administration
U. S. Department of Commerce

THE UNITED STATES MOTION PICTURE INDUSTRY in 1957 continued to expand its foreign business despite numerous serious problems directly affecting the distribution of its films abroad. American films maintained their high popularity with foreign audiences, and dollar remittances from abroad were reported to be at a record level. Estimates for 1957 remittances of U. S. film earnings from our foreign markets have ranged from $215,000,000 to $220,000,000.

The upsurge in motion picture production which began in 1956 continued throughout 1957. More feature films were produced in the United States in 1957 than in any year since 1953. This increasing number of high-quality productions now being exported throughout the world, is probably the most important factor in the expanding foreign business for U. S. films. Our films are becoming more international in scope, more foreign film stars are being cast in U. S. films, and there are a number of films being co-produced with foreign producers. The U. S. film industry must continue to export films of the highest quality if it is to maintain its high position in the world market, for it is the film itself that attracts the audience.

GOLDEN

The film agreements with the United Kingdom and France were renewed in 1957, a new Japanese loan agreement was concluded, and an agreement unblocking frozen film earnings was reached with the Philippines. Also the West German Government has given assurances that no import restrictions will be applied to U. S. films in that very important market during the coming year, and current film earnings now are freely transferable from Australia. Remittances from such major markets as Canada, Mexico Argentina, and Italy were relatively unhampered during the year.

Some of the major problems facing the U. S. industry in their foreign operations were not resolved satisfactorily during 1957. U. S. films are being withheld from Spain, and only a few theaters in Denmark are exhibiting U. S. films, while in India the import quota for U. S. films has been set so low as to threaten continued operation in that country. There are also unsolved problems in Argentina, Brazil, Indonesia, and Uruguay.

A new threat looming on the horizon for American film distribution in the important European market is the "European Common Market" organization and the "Film Pool." The Common Market is being established to permit productions of the six European countries—France, Italy, Germany, Belgium, Netherlands, and Luxembourg—to flow freely between countries, unimpeded by burdensome duties, taxes, quotas, or other trade restrictions. The Film Pool consists of film producers in Germany, Italy, and France who are exploring the possibility of unification of production and distribution in the three markets pending realization of the Common Market. It is considered premature at this time to try to evaluate the possible effects of the Common Market upon the distribution of U. S. films in Europe.

Throughout most of 1957 there were reports about the sale of United States films to Russia and the Soviet satellite countries, including Poland, Czechoslovakia, Hungary, Rumania, and East Germany. However, at the end of 1957 no U. S. films had been contracted for in these areas.

It is no secret that the economic health of the American film industry is very closely tied to the world market. It is generally accepted that approximately 45 per cent of the total income of the industry is accounted for by foreign revenues. Probably no other U. S. industry is more concerned with developments in the international market than the motion picture industry. Although American films now enjoy great favor and the new agreements and developments will give some continued assurances of our film distribution, prospects for U. S. foreign film business in the future would be difficult to forecast.

As will be noted in the country-by-country resume of legislative restrictions that follows, a number of governments have enacted legislation to assist and promote their national film industries or to conserve their dollar exchange. These measures may take the form of import quotas, playing time requirements, rental ceilings, restrictions on film remittances, excessive taxation, censorship difficulties, and import licensing restrictions.

EUROPE

ALBANIA—All motion picture theaters in Albania have been nationalized and the importation, distribution, and exhibition of films is entirely in the hands of the Albanian government which has shown no desire to import any films from the United States.

AUSTRIA—No measures are in effect in Austria which might reduce or prevent the distribution of United States motion pictures. Import licenses are required. The transfer of dollar exchange for film remittances requires a special license obtained from the Austrian National Bank. United States film companies have experienced no serious difficulties in the importation or distribution of their films in Austria during the past year.

BELGIUM—The film agreement between the United States industry and the Belgian Government expired on February 28, 1957. This agreement provided for the entry of about 250 feature films annually from the United States and for remittances in the amount of 65 per cent of current film earnings. It was reported that the agreement was extended. Import quotas are not a factor in Belgium as sufficient U. S. films are imported each year for the market. United States film companies experienced no difficulty in Belgium in the importation of their films or in the remittance of film earnings during 1957.

Belgian distributors and exhibitors operate under an agreement negotiated in August 1957 with the Ministry of Economic Affairs which set up a scale governing film rentals. The present regulations provide for rentals varying from 30 per cent of the net weekly receipts derived from the showing of the film (when these receipts are less than 5,000 Belgian francs) to 45 per cent of the net weekly receipts (when these receipts are higher than 100,000 Belgian francs). Special rental rates apply to certain first-run theaters in large cities and special rates will also apply to exceptional films.

The Belgian Government provides for the payment of a subsidy to producers of Belgian films under certain prescribed limits, such as type of films, length, nationality of persons employed, and production in Belgium. The premium varies with the length and type of film produced. For example, for long films of 1,800 meters or more, the premium may be 80 per cent of the admission tax; for shorter films 25 per cent; and for newsreels 5 per cent.

BULGARIA—All theaters in Bulgaria are nationalized and the importation and distribution of motion pictures is controlled by the state monopoly. The Bulgarian government has shown no desire to import films from the United States.

CZECHOSLOVAKIA—The Government of Czechoslovakia has established a state monopoly that controls the production, distribution, and exhibition of motion pictures. No imports may be made without a license; an allocation of foreign exchange automatically follows issuance of the import license. No new United States films are known to have been released in Czechoslovakia in recent years. However, in October 1956, the U. S. film industry began negotiating for the sale of U. S. films to that market. The sales were contingent upon mutually satisfactory terms to be concluded with reference to dollar payments and titles to be selected. At the end of 1957 no U. S. films had been contracted for.

DENMARK—The importation of foreign films into Denmark takes place freely and the remittances of rentals are permitted to all areas, including the dollar area. However, rentals are negotiated between distributors and exhibitors and are limited to 30 per cent of box-office receipts. U. S. film companies objected to this low ceiling and in May 1955 withdrew from the market. During 1957 an agreement was signed between the U. S. film distributors and several individual Danish exhibitors and at the end of 1957 some 20 theaters in Denmark were again receiving new United States feature films for exhibition. Attempts are being made to negotiate settlement with all the theaters in Denmark so that normal distribution of U. S. films may again take place.

Producers of Danish full-length entertainment films receive Government aid in the form of a license to operate a motion picture theater, which is exempted from the cinema tax on theater profits. Producers of Danish feature films also receive a rebate of a portion of the entertainment tax on theater tickets sold for Danish films. Ceiling prices on theater admissions were abolished in 1952.

FINLAND—There are no quotas limiting the number of films which may be imported into Finland. Restrictions on the transfer of foreign exchange may tend to reduce the distribution of imported films. Import licenses are required but carry no title to foreign exchange, for which a separate application is required.

FRANCE—After several months of negotiations, a new Franco-American film agreement was announced in November 1957 to replace the agreement which expired June 30, 1957. The new agreement is for a two-year period to June 30, 1959, and follows closely the provisions contained in the previous agreement. It provides for a total of 110 import licenses for U. S. films per year. The basic remittance provisions reportedly are in line with the agreement which expired on June 30 which authorized monthly remittances of U. S. film earnings at the official rate of exchange in the amount of $235,000. U. S. film earnings in excess of this amount are blocked and may be employed for various special purposes. However, U. S. film remittances will be made at the new official rate of 420 francs to the dollar, under the old agreement the official rate was 350 francs to the dollar. Supplementing remittances there is a provision in the agreement that $50,000 per film, per year, may be remitted from French earnings of U. S. films entered in the Cannes Film Festival.

Playing time regulations require French films to be exhibited five weeks out of each thirteen. In 1948 the French Government created a temporary fund for the development of the French film industry. Revenue for this fund was supplied by taxes on theater admissions and on a meterage tax based on the length of the film. In August 1953 these taxes were increased when a new film assistance law was enacted making the film fund a permanent subsidy for the French industry. As of May 1, 1954, the meterage tax was fixed at 450 francs per meter for feature films in the French language and 50 francs per meter for foreign feature films shown in the original version. In May 1955 the French Government issued a decree increasing the taxes on admission tickets, which provided the fund with about 90 percent of its receipts in 1954. The tax on tickets priced up to 130 francs remained unchanged but it increased sharply on tickets over 130 francs. It is estimated that the additional revenue from these increased taxes will be 1,500,000,000 francs yearly and bring the fund's total annual receipts up to 5,500,000,000 francs.

GERMANY—No import quota regulations are in effect which would reduce or prevent distribution of United States films in Western Germany. However, the United States film industry has agreed to voluntarily limit the number of releases each year and to import only that type of film which has a logical market in Western Germany. Import licenses are required.

Representatives of the United States and the Federal Republic of Germany signed an agreement on April 26, 1956 making certain changes in the German tariff concession affecting motion picture films. The new agreement eliminated a clause in the schedule which provided that if the Germans establish a screen quota for domestic films they could not make such quotas higher than 27 percent. In return for this withdrawal, Germany agreed not to impose any burdensome restrictions upon the importation or exhibition of foreign films in Germany that would not be applied in a like manner to domestic films. The new agreement was to run until December 1, 1957 and was to be extended for another year unless officially denounced by ether party by September 30, 1957. Early in September assurances were given by the German Government that the importation of U. S. films would be free from restrictions for another year.

In September 1954, the German Government virtually abolished the system of blocked accounts. Since that date United States film companies have encountered no serious difficulty in remitting their film earnings. While there have been reports during recent years that steps would be taken to assist German film producers through a subsidy plan, no such plans were put into operation during 1957.

Despite the absence of any laws requiring a percentage of German films to be exhibited, screen time for German films has been increasing. It was estimated that German films accounted for more than 50 percent of the box-office receipts in 1956. U. S. films are estimated to account for approximately 30 percent of box-office receipts.

GIBRALTAR—All booking of films into Gibraltar is done through London. Applications for dollars are made to the Financial Secretary of the Colony, and dollars can be had for the purchase of United States films only if the British Financial Secretary in England approves. A Gibraltar Ordinance provides that all U. S. dollars acquired must be surrendered to the Government. It is unlikely that permit to import films and export currency from Gibraltar would be granted.

GREECE—Imports of United States films into Greece are exempt from all quantitative and foreign exchange limitations and are governed by general free import licensing regulations applicable to all Greek imports. Motion picture imports are authorized both on a percentage and on a flat royalty basis from all sources. There are two general limitations, the amount of flat royalties could not exceed $4,000 per feature film and remittance of flat royalties could not be effected until the picture involved had been released for exhibition in a first-run theater in Greece, but could be remitted within 60 days of such exhibition. Inasmuch as nearly all U. S. films are imported on a percentage basis, this has little affect on the distribution of U. S. films.

In the case of films imported for distribution on a percentage royalty basis, the foreign producer's share may not exceed 60 percent of gross receipts. The foreign producers' share of royalty earnings must be deposited by the distributor with the Bank of Greece in a blocked account in the name of the foreign producer within 60 days from the last day of the month during which the picture involved was released for exhibition. Remittances in foreign exchange are made periodically by the Bank of Greece after the records of the distributor have been audited to check the accuracy of the amounts deposited with the Bank.

On April 2, 1954, a general regulation was issued requiring Greek importers to obtain an import approval certificate from Greek authorities prior to contracting with a foreign supplier and before effecting shipment of films. United States companies were warned against making shipment before necessary import approval had been granted.

HUNGARY—Production, distribution, and exhibition of motion pictures in Hungary have been nationalized and are completely under Government control. No new United States films have been released in Hungary in recent years. However, in October 1956 the United States film industry opened negotiations with the Hungarians in an attempt to again sell U. S. films in that market. It was reported that a provisional agreement had been concluded for the sale of U. S. films and at the end of 1957 there was renewed hope that U. S. films would again be distributed in Hungary. The agreement is contingent upon mutually satisfactory terms with reference to dollar payments and titles to be selected.

ICELAND—All motion picture films brought into Iceland must obtain an import and foreign exchange license from the Import Bureau. Remittances of film earnings can only be submitted against licenses. It is reported that very little restrictions are placed on the granting of licenses. Approximately 60 per cent of the films shown in Iceland are of United States origin.

IRELAND—The importation of motion pictures into Ireland continues to be handled from the United Kingdom. All United States films that are exhibited are obtained from the British subsidiaries of United States film companies and payment is made in sterling. No quotas or other import regulations are in effect in Ireland that restrict importation and exhibition of United States films.

ITALY—Under the terms of the Italian film agreement, which was negotiated at the end of 1955 and extends until August 1959, United States film companies are permitted to remit a reported $3,000,000 annually at the official rate of exchange, plus the transfer of the equivalent of their payments for dubbing tax fees and 5 percent of any balance remaining in their blocked accounts at the end of each calendar year. It has been estimated that under this agreement U. S. film companies would be able to remit about $4,200,000 annually. Utilization of blocked U. S. film earnings in Italy have been liberalized to permit compensation deals. It is believed that U. S. film companies have very little blocked funds in Italy.

The new Italian film law, enacted in July 1956, contains provisions increasing the dubbing license fee and the playing time requirements for Italian films. The dubbing license fee for United States films was increased to 5,500,000 lire from the previous fee of 2,500,000 lire and playing time requirements for Italian films were increased from 80 days a year to 100 days a year. The law also contains provisions setting up a subsidy of 16 percent of gross receipts to be paid to Italian producers and a 20 percent tax rebate for theaters that exhibit Italian films. Funds accruing from the 5,500,000 dubbing license fee are used to promote and finance exports of Italian films, to help provide adequate theater equipment in towns which do not have satisfactory facilities, and to finance production and distribution of Italian films. The law continues in effect until June 30, 1959 (625 lire equals U. S. $1.00).

LUXEMBOURG—There are no trade restrictions which might prevent, retard, or hinder United States films being shown in Luxembourg and no such measures are contemplated. Import permits are not required. Films rented by the Luxembourg theaters are paid for through Belgium and adequate foreign exchange has been available for this purpose.

MALTA—All United States and British films entering Malta are brought into the country through London and are distributed by the Malta United Film Corporation, a subsidiary of the Kinematograph Renters Society in London.

NETHERLANDS—In 1953 the Netherlands Bank granted film distributors permission to negotiate licensing contracts and to settle payment obligations with foreigners without previous approval by the Bank. Since that time there has been no serious difficulty in the allocation of foreign exchange for the import of United States films.

Regulations governing playing time for films provide that exhibitors shall show for at least 12 weeks each year feature films that were not made in the United States and for which no dollars would be paid. Due in large measure to this quota. European films have in the past few years obtained a greater share of the Dutch market. While more feature films are being imported into The Netherlands, distributors of U. S. films had little to gain from the more favorable overall developments. In 1954 negotiations between the United States film industry and the Netherlands Motion Picture Association resulted in the establishment of new rental rates. Wide-screen and three-dimensional type pictures are now subject to free negotiations between distributors and exhibitors, however, the rental of all other feature films must be within a sliding scale from 22½ percent to 40 percent.

NORWAY—There are no import quotas or playing time restrictions in effect in Norway. Import permits are required for the importation of U. S. films, however, no difficulty is encountered in obtaining such licenses. In July 1956 the Norges Bank (Bank of Norway) agreed to a new arrangement for the transfer of film earnings which still remains in effect. This provides for the immediate transfer in dollars of 80 percent of the earnings; the remaining 20 percent must remain in Norway and can be used for any purpose within the country.

In October 1954, an agreement was reached regarding the question of film rentals which had been a matter of great concern to U. S. companies. This agreement provides that the film rental for regular features shall be 40 percent, except for a maximum of two films annually which may be selected by each major U. S. film company and which shall be freely negotiable betweeen the particular company and the exhibitors. However, if no agreement can be reached as to the amount of the rentals for these two films and the U. S. company refuses to release them at 40 percent, the exhibitors association may then refuse to exhibit any films released by the U. S. company not already covered by existing contracts.

POLAND — Government-owned "Film Polski" has a monopoly of production, distribution, and exhibition of motion pictures in Poland. All transfers of foreign exchange are subject to the approval of the Polish Government and in recent years no foreign exchange has been secured for U. S. films. However, in October 1956 the United States film industry began negotiations with "Film Polski" in an attempt to arrange for the sale of U. S. films. It was reported that a provisional agreement had been concluded with Poland, the sales to be contingent upon mutually satisfactory terms with reference to dollar payments and titles to be selected. At the end of 1957 no U. S. films had been contracted for under this provisional agreement.

PORTUGAL—Remittance of United States film royalties has been free of complications during recent years, however, they are subject to prior sanction by the Bank of Portugal. Theaters must exhibit Portuguese films one week to every five weeks of foreign films, except when national productions are not available. Licenses are required for all imports, however, distributors have encountered no difficulty in obtaining licenses for films. During recent years the Portuguese Government has allocated a total of $600,000 annually for motion picture films.

RUMANIA—In 1948, a decree was approved nationalizing all motion picture enterprises in Rumania, including production, distribution, and exhibition. Foreign exchange may be transferred only upon approval of the National Bank of Rumania and as far as is known no transfers for U. S. films have been made during the past several years. In October 1956, the United States film industry began negotiations with the Rumanians in an attempt to distribute their films in that market. It is expected that the U. S. industry will further explore the possibilities of selling their films to the Rumanians during 1958.

SPAIN—In 1955 a Spanish film agreement between the Motion Picture Export Association of America and the Spanish Government provided for a total of 100 United States feature films to be imported, 60 to be distributed by the U. S. distributors and 40 by Spanish distributors. It also contained provisions for the remittance of a portion of U. S. film earnings. However, shortly after this agreement was announced, the Spanish Government issued an order, effective October 1, 1955, requiring all motion picture distribution companies in Spain to distribute, in the theaters they serviced, one Spanish-made film for every four foreign-made films dubbed into the Spanish language. The U. S. film companies objected to this order, stating that acceptance would constitute a precedent that wou'd gravely affect their worldwide film market. As the result of this order, the MPEA withdrew from the Spanish market. While this problem has been under negotiation almost continuously since that date at the end of 1957 the major United States film companies were still not sending their films into Spain.

Spanish theaters must show Spanish films one week out of six unless the film industry cannot provide the exhibitor with a Spanish production in which case he may continue to show foreign films. This is often the case. A newsreel must be shown on each theater program and the only newsreel permitted in Spain is the nationally produced "NO-DO."

SWEDEN—While the importation of motion picture films was liberalized in October 1954 and import licenses are no longer required by the Swedish authorities, the transfer of film earnings is still subject to rigid control. All transfer of foreign exchange requires authorization of the Swedish foreign exchange authorities. The transfer of film rentals and royalties is subject to a special agreement between the Swedish Riksbank and the United States film companies. In renewing the annual agreement in 1952, it was reported that the Swedish Government somewhat liberalized its restrictions on the transfer of current film royalties. Blocked film earnings may be liquidated by way of special compensation transactions. At the present time it is possible to obtain rawstock film, negatives, and prints as needed to maintain normal distribution in Sweden of United States films and no problems have been encountered with regard to foreign exchange.

SWITZERLAND—Imports of films are controlled by the quasi-official Swiss Film Chamber in Bern, which issues import permits to holders of quotas. Quotas for the importation of films into Switzerland are based on the Federal Decree of July 7, 1939, which granted distributors the right to import feature films to the same extent as imported during the 4-year period January 1935 through December 1938. The usual quota assigned to an importer is equal to at least 50 percent and at most 70 percent of the average number of 35-mm. features he imported during this 4-year period. Provision is made for special cases, both for extra quotas for established importers and for assignment of quotas to importers who did not exist in the market in 1938. Contingents are based on titles and are allotted to individual importers and not to countries. There are no restrictions on the transfer of foreign exchange.

TURKEY—No quota or contingent measures are in effect which might reduce or prevent the distribution of U. S. motion pictures in Turkey. An import and foreign exchange permit must be obtained from the Turkish authorities. Since 1954 dollar exchange has been in very short supply and U. S. film companies have had considerable difficulty in receiving payment for their films. U. S. film earnings have accumulated into a sizeable sum and the liquidation of these arrears has become a serious problem. In October 1956 it was announced that the Informational Media Guaranty Program of the United States Government had allocated $600,000 to enable Turkey to purchase or lease U. S. films. U. S. film distributors, after signing contracts with the U. S. Information Agency, would accept payment in the currency of Turkey with the U. S. Government guaranteeing conversion into dollars of an amount up to $600,000. In September 1957 a new agreement was set up in the amount of $500,000 for the year beginning October 1, 1957. U. S. film companies have no distribution set-up in Turkey and sell their films to independent Turkish distributors.

Motion picture imports are subject to a transaction tax, which is assessed on most types of processed and semi-processed goods imported into Turkey at the rate of 18 percent of landed cost (including customs duties and various miscellaneous taxes). The Turkish fiscal authorities have ruled that not only was the motion picture film (imported copies) subject to this tax but that the royalties or their equivalent were to be included in calculating the basis of the tax. There is also a substantial admission tax differential in favor of Turkish films which gives a strong impetus to the domestic industry. All efforts to have the transaction tax reduced or have the admission tax differential removed have failed.

U.S.S.R.—The Soviet film industry is a government monopoly under the jurisdiction of the Ministry of the Motion Picture Industry, and both domestic production and importation of foreign films are subject to the regulations of this Ministry. There have been reports during the past few years that the Russians were interested in importing U. S. films. However, at the end of 1957 no new U. S. films had been contracted for.

UNITED KINGDOM—The new Anglo-American film agreement to cover the year beginning October 1, 1957, extends for another year the provisions of the previous agreement. The transfer of $17,000,000 is again provided for and there are provisions permitting convertibility of certain amounts of United States production investments in Britain. The U. S. film companies may again remit a portion of their share of the Eady Tax Plan money, not to exceed $2,250,000. Annual remittances under this agreement are estimated to amount to approximately $25,000,000.

Government trade restrictions on the showing of foreign films have been in effect since 1927. At present 30 percent of the first feature films exhibited in British theaters and 25 percent of the supporting films must be British productions. The Eady Tax Plan to assist the British film industry was put into operation in 1950. This plan called for a voluntary increase in the entertainment tax to establish a subsidy to be used by British film producers, distributors, and exhibitors. The Cinematograph Films Act of 1957 made this levy statutory and extended the plan for a period of 10 years.

Separate import licenses have been required for all motion pictures except newsreels since 1948. As a sequel to trade agreements negotiations held in Geneva early in 1956, the British Government removed the import duty on exposed negative motion picture films. Since November 1956 these films have been imported duty-free.

The National Film Finance Corporation was established in March 1949 with an initial grant of 5,000,000 pounds sterling as an operating fund from which loans could be made during a five-year period to assist British producers. In 1950 an additional 1,000,000 pounds sterling was made available to the Corporation and in 1957 the lending powers of the Corporation were extended for an additional 10 years.

YUGOSLAVIA—The motion picture industry in Yugoslavia is nationalized and all phases of the industry are controlled by the Government. Because of the critical dollar exchange position of Yugoslavia, in 1952 the U. S. Government allocated dollars, under its Informational Media Guaranty Program, to enable Yugoslavia to purchase U. S. films. United States film companies, after signing contracts with the U. S. Information Agency, accept payment in the currency of Yugoslavia with the U. S. Government guaranteeing conversion of certain amounts of this currency into dollars. Yugoslav Film, the sole Yugoslav agency for importing foreign films, concludes contracts with the U. S. film industry within the framework of this Program. Yugoslav Film signed its first contract with the Motion Picture Export Association of America under this program in 1952 and has signed successive contracts annually since that date. In addition Yugoslav Film concludes contracts with independent U. S. film companies, not members of MPEA. In October 1957 it was reported that a new Yugoslav Film Law established a playing time quota of 10 percent of the screen time for showing of Yugoslav films. In addition a theater cannot terminate a showing date of a domestic picture unless attendance is below 40 percent of a theater's seating capacity for three consecutive days.

CANADA

The permit requirements for foreign exchange remittances were removed at the end of 1951. Since that date, Canadian film distributors are permitted to remit, at the going, or current rate of exchange, to the United States producers the net profits on rentals and royalties, less a withholding tax of 10 per cent. United States motion pictures enter Canada and are distributed throughout all the provinces without quota or exhibition restrictions.

SOUTH AMERICA

ARGENTINA—The past year has been good for the distributors of United States films in Argentina. Since October 1955 there have been no restrictions on remittances of current film earnings. It is believed there are no blocked U. S. film earnings now in Argentina. More United States films are being released and are being well received by the Argentine movie-goers. The United States industry has been trying to get the Argentine Government to adjust the present ceiling prices on theater admissions upward and while it is expected that a reasonable adjustment will be made, at the end of 1957 no change had been announced.

A new Argentine film law, enacted in January 1957, established the National Institute of Cinematography which is charged with the development and protection of the Argentine film industry. This law places a tax on theater admissions with the revenue to be used to assist Argentine producers, provides for the compulsory showing of Argentine films, and establishes minimum rental rates for Argentine films.

In July 1957 the distributors of U. S. films in Argentina were faced with a serious tax problem when the Government imposed a tax ranging up to 200,000 pesos on every foreign film shown in Argentina for the first time. This tax was to become effective on September 1, 1957 but upon representation to the Argentine Government it was suspended pending the working out of a solution which would be satisfactory to both the Argentine Government and the film importers. At the end of 1957 this tax problem had not been finally resolved.

BOLIVIA—Import licenses are not required for motion pictures going into Bolivia. Foreign exchange for importation of motion pictures must be obtained on the free market and is very scarce. The free market rate in December 1957 was 8,640 Bolivianos to the dollar.

BRAZIL—No special restrictions are imposed on the entry of United States motion pictures into Brazil. Import license problems have almost disappeared and licenses are now granted with the stipulation that exchange will be required only after the film has been distributed in Brazil and the earnings are to be remitted. During 1957 a new foreign exchange ruling, effective August 14, 1957, states that after that date all U. S. film earnings will be remitted at the free market rate. Prior to this date 70 percent of U. S. film earnings were remitted at a special rate of 45 cruzeiros to the dollar and 30 percent at the free market rate. The free market rate in October 1957 was about 82 cruzeiros to the dollar. The United States film distributors in Brazil have continued their efforts to obtain an increase in the admission price ceiling of 18 cruzeiros, however, at the end of 1957 this celing was still in effect.

Playing time regulations require that Brazilian films must be shown in the ratio of one Brazilian film program to every eight foreign film programs. Since 1954 there has been a Bank of Brazil regulation which in effect compelled importers of foreign films to have copies of their films made in Brazilian laboratories. The regulations state that only one copy of black and white 35-mm. pictures may be imported and if additional copies were needed, 50 percent of these copies must be printed in Brazilian film laboratories. This percentage may be increased once the supply of raw-stock films becomes more regular and Brazilian laboratories have shown their ability to turn out sufficient prints.

BRITISH GUIANA—No special restrictions are imposed on the entry of United States motion pictures into British Guiana and no serious import problems have been encountered. While dollar exchange is in short supply, it is believed that sufficient foreign exchange is made available to permit the importation of enough U. S. films to supply the market.

CHILE—No special restrictions are imposed on the entry of United States motion pictures into Chile. In 1956 Chile established a new foreign exchange system. Foreign exchange for film remittances may be freely remitted at the banking free rate. This new exchange system replaced the complex set-up involving multiple exchange rates and import licensing regulations. During 1957 it was reported that price controls on theater admissions would be removed at the end of the year. Theaters in Chile during the last half of 1957 could increase their admission prices 25 percent if they so desired.

COLOMBIA—There are no quota measures in effect at the present time which reduce or prevent distribution of United States pictures in Colombia. Import permits are required but distributors of U. S. films have no difficulty in obtaining them. During 1957 an agreement was reached covering remittance of U. S. film earnings prior to January 1, 1957. The agreement provided that 60 percent of these earnings could be transferred immediately in dollars and 40 percent would be made available in 30 equal monthly installments. Remittance of 1957 film earnings had not been arranged at the end of the year. Requests have been made to Colombian authorities to permit an increase in theater admission prices, however, no notable increases have been granted.

ECUADOR—There are no trade restrictions which prevent or restrict the distribution of United States films in Ecuador. Import permits are required. Motion Picture films imported into Ecuador are included in List II, and foreign exchange for film remittances must be obtained in the legal free market. It is reported that dollar exchange is available for such remittances.

PARAGUAY—The only restrictions imposed on the importation of motion picture films into Paraguay are those arising from the shortage of dollar exchange. Import permits are required and are issued by the Central Bank of Paraguay on the basis of monetary expenditure per program. The 1957 Exchange Budget of the Central Bank for motion pictures amounted to $155,000. This is considered as sufficient dollar exchange to allow the motion picture industry to operate at a minimum level. The Bank also maintained the exchange rate of 85 guaranis to the dollar, the rate applicable to Group II or "Non-essential" imports.

PERU—Motion pictures may be entered into Peru without license or authorization of any kind. The status of remittances of film earnings remains unchanged. Foreign exchange for remittances of film earnings since August 1948 must be obtained in the free market.

SURINAM—No special restrictions are imposed on the entry of United States motion pictures into Surinam. While dollar exchange is still a restricting influence, it is believed that foreign exchange is made available to permit the importation of sufficient U. S. films to supply the market.

URUGUAY—Import permits are required and application must be made to the office of the Controller of Exports and Imports. Film imports are included in the Third Category, non-essential or luxury class, for the purpose of allocation of exchange. In December 1957 exchange for imports of Third Category goods was available at the rate of 4.11 pesos to the dollar plus 2 pesos surcharge, making the rate 6.11 pesos to the dollar. At the end of 1957 the U. S. industry was investigating a projected law to levy a 10 percent tax on foreign film producers' share of the gross receipts of movie box-offices resulting from the exhibition of their films. This law has passed the National Council of Government and has been transmitted to the General Assembly for approval.

VENEZUELA—No permits are required for the importation of motion pictures nor the the purchase of exchange in payment of such imports. There are at present no import or foreign exchange restrictions which would serve to restrict the showing of U. S. films in Venezuela.

MEXICO AND CENTRAL AMERICA

MEXICO—Since February 1949 an import permit has been required for motion picture films. There are no quantitative restrictions on the importation of motion pictures and no difficulty has been encountered in the transfer of dollar exchange. Early in 1954 the Mexican peso was devalued from 8.65 pesos to the dollar to 12.50 pesos to the dollar and this affected the amount remitted from this market, as there were no notable increases in theatre admissions that might offset this loss. The Mexican Government imposes a ceiling on theatre admission prices.

COSTA RICA—No quota or contingent measures are in effect in Costa Rica that might interfere with the showing of United States films. There are no restrictions prohibiting or limiting the transfer of foreign exchange, however, all exchange required for the payment of rentals must be obtained in the free market.

EL SALVADOR—There are no trade restrictions designed to reduce or prevent the distribution of United States films in El Salvador. Import permits are not required and no difficulty is encountered in the transfer of foreign exchange. Practically all distribution of films was handled by the Circuito de Teatros Nacionales, a government monopoly, until in 1954 when the theatre promotion bill was passed encouraging private capital to invest in the motion picture industry. The bill provides for exemption from payment of duties on materials, supplies, and equipment used in the construction and improvement of theatres. It also provided that the Circuito, previously exempt from taxation, would be required to pay the same diret taxes as private exhibitors. As the result of this act, several persons and organizations announced their intention to finance the construction and operation of privately-owned theatres. In October 1955 the first independent theatre was opened and by September 1956 there were four privately-owned theatres in El Salvador and three others were under construction.

GUATEMALA—Import permits are not required and there are no foreign exchange restrictions that might hamper the distribution of United States films in Guatemala.

HONDURAS—Import permits are not required, and while foreign exchange for films, as well as all other foreign exchange transactions, must be cleared by the Foreign Exchange Control Commission, no difficulty has been encountered.

NICARAGUA—Importation of motion pictures into Nicaragua has remained unrestricted. Import permits are required. There are no foreign exchange restrictions which might hamper the distribution of United States films in Nicaragua.

PANAMA—Import permits are not required. United States currency is the medium of exchange in Panama and there are no restrictions prohibiting or limiting the transfer of funds.

CUBA—Importation of motion pictures into Cuba has remained unrestricted. Import permits are not required and there are no foreign exchange restrictions that might hamper the distribution of United States films. The National Institute for the Development of the Cuban Moving Picture Industry was established in 1955 with rather wide authority. In the decree establishing the Institute provisions are made for acquisition of equipment, studios, and other properties; granting of leases and concessions; exemption from customs duties and taxes; loans to moving picture producers; and other benefits and powers. A decree was issued in August 1955 which prohibited the exhibition of foreign-made short commercials, reviews and other films which contain advertising matter. This prohibition does not apply to newsreels or documentary films which do not contain commercial advertising.

DOMINICAN REPUBLIC — No restrictions on importation of films or transfer of foreign exchange.

HAITI—No restrictions on importation of films or transfer of foreign exchange.

AFRICA

ALGERIA—The agreement between the United States film industry and the French Government also applies to Algeria and regulations concerning the importation of films are similar to those in France. The direct importation of films from foreign countries has practically ceased and normally all films are sent first to Paris for dubbing and then brought into Algeria. Import permits are not required for films imported from France but would be required for films from outside the franc zone in the event such films were to be paid for out of officially allocated foreign exchange funds. Playing time regulations reserve a portion of the screen time to the showing of French films. United States film earnings are either deposited locally or remitted to Paris.

ANGOLA—There are no governmental regulations in Angola tending to restrict or even hinder the presentation of American motion pictures in favor of those of other countries. Films are brought in and shown throughout the country irrespective of origin, and while permits are required for the importation of films, the distributors state that no difficulties are encountered in obtaining permits for their requirements. Since the great majority of imported films are received from Lisbon film distributors, foreign exchange presents no problem, as all payments are made in Portuguesse escudos. A few films are received from South Africa.

BELGIAN CONGO—Import permits are not required for motion pictures and although licenses are required for the transfer of foreign exchange, no difficulties have been experienced in securing dollars to pay for U. S. films.

BRITISH EAST AFRICA—There are no legal restrictions placed on United States films entering British East Africa for exhibition. All films exhibited are received from South Africa for which sterling is paid and there is no problem of the shortage of dollars. United States films continue to dominate the market and it seems unlikely that any measures are contemplated to reduce the number of films imported. An estimate is made to the Government as to the number of films expected to be imported from South Africa and permits are freely granted by the imports controller.

EGYPT—The Egyptian Government has no import quotas limiting the number of foreign films which may be imported. Import licenses are required for films imported from the United States. Events in Egypt, occasioned by the Suez Canal dispute, disrupted normal commercial trading with that country in 1956. U. S. films companies in 1957 were granted a blanket import license in terms of weight of the films, with the division of the licenses to be worked out in Egypt by the U. S. film distributors. This blanket import license reportedly permits about 280 United States feature films to be imported. While there were negotiations throughout 1957 regarding the remittance of U. S. film earnings, at the end of the year no information was available with regard to whether this problem was satisfactorily resolved.

In November 1956, a new Egyptian film law provided that Egyptian theaters shall reserve not less than three weeks a year, i.e., one week per "season" starting January 1, May 1, and September 1, for the showing of Egyptian motion pictures. The Cairo press carried a story in June 1957 that an Egyptian law was being considered to establish a "film industry consolidation fund" to promote the Egyptian film industry by encouraging showing of Egyptian films at home and abroad, and by extending loans to film producers. Revenue for the fund was to come from taxation, state contributions, and capital investments. It was also reported that a law was being considered which would assess a tax on imported films up to 300 Egyptian pounds per film. However, at the end of 1957 nothing definite was known with regard to these two proposals.

ETHIOPIA—The only trade restrictions on the importation and distribution of United States films in Ethiopia are the customs duties levied on them. Although exchange control measures are in effect, at the present time the Exchange Controller is granting all requests for exchange to finance the importation of motion pictures.

FRENCH WEST AFRICA—All foreign films are imported from France and may be freely imported without quota restrictions or import licenses. Film distributors handle their revenues in French colonial francs. There is a requirement that reserves a portion of the screen time to the showing of French films.

GHANA—An import permit must be secured before goods can be imported into Ghana. Ghana, which became independent on March 6, 1957, permits imports of merchandise from the United States only for essential items which are not available from nondollar sources. Practically all films are brought into Ghana from the United Kingdom or from Nigeria. While Ghana remains in the sterling area, some liberalization of the exchange control system, which has restricted U. S. imports, is being effected.

LIBERIA—Imports permits are not required and there are no restrictions on the transfer of foreign exchange.

MADAGASCAR—Import licenses are required for motion pictures imported from countries other than France and for which officially allocated foreign exchange is required for payment. Films are usually imported from France and are paid for in francs. This does not mean that all films are of French production, about 60 per cent of the films received are of United States origin, but all films are dubbed in the French language before being imported. Regulations require that a portion of the theaters' screen time must be reserved for the showing of French films.

MOROCCO—The areas formerly known as French Morocco, Spanish Morocco, and the International Zone of Tangier are now called the Southern and Northern Zones and the Tangier Province and form the independent Kingdom of Morocco. Full economic integration of the three zones has not yet been completed and import and exchange regulations in existence before the independence remain generally in force. Foreign exchange is controlled by the new Morocco Government. U. S. film distributors in Morocco import U. S. films from France which have been doubled into the French language.

MOZAMBIQUE—Import permits are required, but film exhibitors have not had any difficulty obtaining films since most South African distributors have found it possible to accept payment for their rental fees in South African pounds. In those few cases where dollar payments were required, the exchange has been made available.

NIGERIA—Import permits are required. Foreign exchange is strictly controlled and dollars are not allocated except for items considered essential for the economy of the country. Practically all films, including those produced in the United States, are imported from agents in the United Kingdom or from Ghana.

TUNISIA—Import permits are required for all importations involving foreign currency. As of January 1, 1956, Tunisia established a Customs Union with France. Tunisia received its independence from France in March 1956 but it is believed that practically all United States films are still being imported from France and enter Tunisia without import permit and are paid for in francs.

UNION OF SOUTH AFRICA—Under the import licensing system in operation in South Africa, distributors of United States films are permitted freely to import their product under open license and are allowed to remit a portion of their film earnings with the remainder being held in blocked accounts. During 1955 import controls in general were liberalized and it is believed that U. S. film companies were allowed to remit a substantial portion of their earnings. There has been no indication of any decline in the number of United States films shown in South Africa and no serious problems have been reported regarding transfer of film earnings.

SOUTH PACIFIC, ASIA, AND THE EAST

AUSTRALIA—Import permits are required for motion picture films, however, there are no restrictions on the number of films to be imported. During 1957 the Australian Government further liberalized remittances of United States film earnings and as of June 30, 1957 placed the companies on a current remittal basis. Current film earnings now are freely transferable without restriction and blocked film earnings may be remitted in equal installments over a three-year period beginning July 1, 1957.

In the states of New South Wales and Victoria there are quota laws, determined yearly, which govern the percentage of Australian and British films to be shown. In New South Wales distributors are required to distribute a number of Australian films equal to three percent of the total number of films distributed, and exhibitors are required to exhibit 2.5 percent Australian films and 15 percent British films. In Victoria the law provides a quota for Australian films which is the same as in New South Wales, but does not require the showing of British films. When it is not economically feasible to maintain this quota the restriction is waived and in practice the quotas do not work any hardship on the distribution of U. S. films.

BURMA—In October 1954 the Cinematograph (Amendment) Act, 1954, empowered the President of Burma to establish quotas for the exhibition of Burmese film and to set rental rates to be paid Burmese producers. Effective July 1, 1955, a screen quota was established directing Burmese theaters to show Burmese films for 60 days a year.

Early in 1956 it was reported that import licenses were not being granted for U. S. films and that the Government of Burma was contemplating import quotas for films. In July 1956 an import quota was established which would have allowed each U. S. film company to import only 10 complete programs compared to previous annual imports of 35 to 40 programs. The U. S. film companies rejected this quota and returned their import licenses to the Burmese Government. In October 1956, a satisfactory solution to the problem was reached and an agreement concluded permitting 2,100,000 feet of exposed films (about 230 films) to be licensed for import from the United States. Film remittances under this agreement are reported to be virtually free, subject to licensing arrangements with the National Bank of Burma. In 1957 this agreement was extended for another year until September 30, 1958.

CEYLON—United States films have been placed under an open general license in Ceylon and may be imported without an individual license. Exchange controls which came into effect in June 1948 have not seriously hampered the importation of films. Transmission of foreign exchange is controlled by the Controller of Exchange. The annual quota for motion pictures is about $200,000 established on a historical basis, using the year 1946 as the base period.

CHINA (Mainland)—The communist regime has taken over complete control of production, distribution, and exhibition of motion picture films in all areas of China under their control. No new United States films are being imported into this area and no U. S. films are being exhibited.

FIJI ISLANDS—Most films shown in the Fiji Islands are imported from New Zealand and payments is made in New Zealand pounds. Films imported directly from the United States would be subject to license requirements applicable to imports from hard currency areas.

FORMOSA (Taiwan)—Formosa has a film import quota limiting the number of films to be imported. For the year ending June 30, 1956 the quota was set at 444 feature films with the United States being allocated 327 films. This annual quota has continued in effect with approximately the same number of films allocated to the United States each year. Only film earnings based on percentage of net theater receipts may be remitted from Formosa and earnings from flat rentals or under minimum guarantee are not legally remittable. Since June 1, 1954, foreign exchange remittances from Formosa have been subject to a 20 percent Defense Tax based on the amount of foreign exchange applied for and approved.

HONG KONG—Import permits are not required for motion pictures but after delivery has been taken the motion pictures must be declared to the government for censorship purposes. A quota has been set up whereby theaters are required to show 7 days of British films for every 70 days of United States pictures. This has not been strictly adhered to because of the insufficient supply of British films. There are no measures making it mandatory to show Hong Kong produced films. No limitations are placed on the amount of foreign exchange transferred for motion pictures.

INDIA—The situation in India has grown steadily worse during 1957. Imports of motion pictures into India are regulated by licenses issued by Governmental import control authorities. Licenses are granted against quotas prescribed for individual importers over a six months period. Early in 1957 it was announced that there would be a 50 percent reduction in the number of import licenses to be granted for foreign films during the January-June period. No import licenses were granted during the quarter July-September and the import quota for the six months beginning October 1, 1957 was further cut to 10 percent of previous quotas. It is doubtful if this will enable U. S. film companies to import enough films to remain in business in India. U. S. film companies, which have been releasing about 250 features in India, under this new quota could bring in only about 25 features. It is reported that the Government of India would probably have no objection to importers devising some system whereby a greater number of films could be imported provided the money paid annually was limited to the value of the 10 percent now allowed. At the end of 1957 it was reported that a satisfactory solution to this problem had been reached and that U. S. films would be imported with the provision that payment for the films would be deferred.

Effective December 1, 1956, the Government of India raised the import duty on exposed motion picture films from 4.2 annas per linear foot to 8 annas per linear foot (16 annas equal 1 rupee which is worth about 21 cents in U. S. currency). Import curbs were also placed on raw-stock films.

INDONESIA—The principal difficulty encountered in distributing United States films in Indonesia is that of securing foreign exchange with which to remit film earnings. Negotiations have been carried on almost continuously during the past several years seeking to solve some of the problems in Indonesia with regard to censorship, taxation, and remittance of film earnings. In 1955 it was reported that over $1,000,000 of U. S. film earnings could be remitted covering earnings accrued in 1954. Still to be determined is the disposition of blocked film earnings for the years 1955, 1956, and 1957.

The Indonesian Government has established import quotas for motion pictures. For the year ending August 31, 1958 the quota was set at 447 feature films with 225 being allocated to the United States. Only two copies of each film may be imported.

U. S. film companies have also been faced with the problem of obtaining Indonesian nationals for their foreign managers in Indonesia. At the end of 1957 practically all of the companies had satisfactorily met this requirement. Playing time regulations require Class A theaters to show one Indonesian picture every two months and Class B theaters to have six weeks playing time for Indonesian films for every six months.

JAPAN—The Japanese Government announced the regular quota for the import of foreign films into Japan for the fiscal year ending March 31, 1958 had been fixed at 189 feature films, with 122 allocated on a global basis and 44 to non-dollar areas. With respect to the global allocation, the major United States film companies were allocated 101 films and the independent distributors were given 21 films. In addition to the basic quota, a total of 8 bonus films will be divided among companies importing the best quality pictures, while exporters of Japanese films will be given the privilege of importing 15 foreign films which will be allocated on the basis of foreign exchange earned. This is practically the same as allocations for the previous year when a total of 187 films were permitted to be imported. The number of prints of each feature film to be imported is limited to 12. Imports of newsreels were set at 260 and short subjects at 160.

The remittance rate for film earnings was established at the same level as during the previous year. For United States films imported under a percentage rental system, the remittance shall be limited to 25 percent of distribution income when the non-resident's share of the receipts is not more than 60 percent and to 22 percent when more than 60 percent. For films imported under a flat rental system, allocations of foreign currency will be approved at the time permission is granted to the import contract. Accumulated yen earnings in excess of that allowed to be remitted were becoming a matter of serious concern to the U. S. film companies. During 1955 the U. S. motion picture industry negotiated a long-term loan with the Japanese Government in the amount of $7,500,000 payable in semi-annual installments after three years have elapsed. Again in 1957 another loan in the amount of $6,300,000 was negotiated on similar terms.

In October 1956, the Japanese Ministry of Finance issued a regulation limiting the period during which United States motion pictures may be commercially exhibited in Japan to five years after importation. Films that a company wishes to exhibit beyond the five-year period will be regarded as new imports and subject to that company's quota.

NEW CALEDONIA—Import permits for foreign films are not required, however, special authorization is needed to purchase foreign exchange. The Government controls all transactions which require the transfer of foreign exchange. Permits for the use of foreign exchange are issued theoretically only for items considered of prime necessity. However, in actual practice it has been possible for film importers to obtain the foreign exchange required to fill most of their needs.

NEW ZEALAND—New Zealand law makes it mandatory for film distributors to acquire British films to the extent of not less than 20 per cent of the number of foreign feature films exhibited. There are no restrictions prohibiting or limiting the transfer of foreign exchange for films. Import permits are required but are freely granted. There is no customs duty, as such, on imported films, however, there is a Film Hire Tax which is assessed on the net receipts derived from the exhibition of foreign films in New Zealand. With respect to United States films imported into New Zealand the Film Hire Tax is levied at the rate of 25 per cent of such net receipts.

PAKISTAN—Import permits are required for motion picture films. The transfer of foreign exchange is controlled by the Government and since 1953 has been a matter of concern to the United States film companies. The bulk of U. S. films are distributed by member companies of the Motion Picture Export Association of America (MPEA). In 1954 an agreement made between the Government of Pakistan and MPEA authorized remittance of film earnings up to 850,000 rupees for the year ending June 30, 1955. Consideration would also be given to applications for remittances of earnings in excess of this figure after July 1, 1955. In the following year (July 1955-June 1956) a similar agreement was made with MPEA, this time raising the ceiling on remittances to 1,200,000 rupees. Agreements for the years ending June 30, 1957 and June 30, 1958, limited the number of feature films that MPEA could import to 240 but imposed no ceiling on the amount of earnings that could be remitted.

Throughout 1957 the independent U. S. film companies, not members of MPEA, were negotiating with the Government of Pakistan for import licenses. The Pakistan Government was reported to be willing to grant licenses provided the independent film companies made arrangements for the distribution of their films through Pakistani distributors. (rupee equals 21 cents in U. S. currency.)

PHILIPPINES—In June 1949 an act was passed requiring theaters to exhibit pictures made in the Philippines to the extent of 10 percent of their annual exhibitions. Import licenses for motion pictures were not required until July 1956 when the Monetary Board issued instructions that imports of United States films would be subject to an import quota. This quota represented a 20 percent reduction in the number of films to be imported by each film exchange during the second half of 1956. There were strong protests registered against this quota and in November 1956 the Monetary Board decided to eliminate such restriction on the importation of U. S. films.

There have been limitations on the remittance of film earnings from the Philippines since December 1949 when controls were imposed to conserve dollars. From that date until July 1956 importers were allowed to remit 72 percent of the producers' share of their earnings. On July 31, 1956 the Central Bank issued regulations revising the remitttance formula further curtailing remitttances of film earnings. U. S. film companies rejected this new formula and no remittance of film earnings were made until October 1957 when it was announced that a remittance agreement had been concluded. This new agreement provides for the disposal of blocked funds to be accomplished by granting U. S. film companies permission to buy gold in the Philippines and then to sell the gold at the international rate for dollars. With regard to current film earnings the agreement provides for remittances not to exceed $1,800,000 per year.

Another major problem facing U. S. film companies in the Philippines is that regarding the levying of a withholding tax on income of foreign corporations. This tax problem is now in the Philippine courts and involves the base on which this tax is assessed, net income or gross income, also retroactive provisions of the tax going back for four years amounting to a reported $10,000,000.

SINGAPORE AND MALAYA—An import permit is required for the purchase and importation of motion pictures into Singapore. In considering an application for an import permit the Controller of Imports and Exports is guided by the advice and recommendations of the Official Film Censor. According to the Foreign Exchange Regulations, the purchase of foreign exchange for outward remittances is prohibited except with special permission of the Controller of Foreign Exchange. Each of the major U. S. film companies operating in Singapore has its own agreement with the Controller of Foreign Exchange. Ten percent of the playing time, specifically 7 days out of each 70-day period, must be devoted to the showing of British films.

In November 1956, it was announced that the Government of the Federation of Malaya had imposed an import duty on motion picture films. Prior to this date there were no duties levied on imports of films. The distributors of U. S. films have in the past shuttled film prints back and forth between Singapore and Malaya, to fill bookings in both places. The new import duty is levied at the rate of 10 Malayan cents per foot (about 3 1/3 cents in U. S. currency).

THAILAND—Import permits are not required for films imported into Thailand and there are no restrictions on the transfer of foreign exchange covering film imports. Exchange for film remittances is obtained at the open market rate, which is now the only prevailing rate of exchange in Thailand following a revision of the currency structure in 1955.

VIETNAM—Import licenses for motion pictures are required and are granted by the National Exchange Office. Because of a serious shortage of dollar exchange, the United States Government established an Informational Media Guaranty Program for Vietnam in the amount of $1,000,000 for the year beginning October 1, 1956. For the year beginning October 1, 1957 this Guaranty Program was set at $500,000. United States film companies after signing contracts with the U. S. Information Agency accept payment in the currency of Vietnam with the U. S. Government guaranteeing conversion into dollars of an amount established by the contracts. Earnings in excess of this Guaranty Program are blocked in Vietnam. There is a regulation limiting the exhibition of any film to seven days at one theater (designed to stimulate public interest by showing as many different films as possible). Taxes levied on imported films in Vietnam are very high and U. S. film companies are attempting to have the Government reduce these duties.

ADEN—Import permits are required for all goods originating outside the sterling area. Aden, as a British Crown Colony, has regulations which state that no import permits will be granted for goods from Western Hemisphere countries except for articles which cannot be obtained from the sterling area or from European sources and the purchase of which cannot be deferred without serious loss to the community.

AFGHANISTAN—There are no trade restrictions of any type imposed by the Afghan Government on motion pictures, and no such measures appear to be contemplated for the future. No import or quota regulations are in force and, since there is no domestic production of films, no playing time restrictions. The problem of transferring foreign exchange does not arise because all films exhibited are obtained through distributors in India, Pakistan, and Egypt and are paid for in the currency of the country from which they are imported.

IRAN—While import and exchange controls are still in effect in Iran, they are liberally administered and United States film companies are encountering no difficulty in the importation of their films or the remittance of foreign exchange. U. S. film companies usually sell their films to an Iranian distributor for a specified period of time, the films to be destroyed at the end of that period.

IRAQ—The Directorate General of Imports provides an annual allocation of foreign exchange for the importation of United States films. For the past few years this amount has been about $300,000 and has been divided among 8 firms to purchase U. S. films. Each of these firms is authorized to enter into a contract with one of the U. S. film companies. The foreign exchange allocation for 1957 was set at $280,000. Permits are required to import films into Iraq, however, importers have no difficulty in obtaining licenses. During 1957 Iraq maintained a liberal import program for dollar items and it is generally believed that no problems have been encountered with regard to importation of U. S. films or the transfer of foreign exchange.

ISRAEL—In principle, foreign exchange for importation of goods into Israel is made available at the time the import license is granted. However, in the case of motion picture imports there is an arrangement whereby licenses are granted leaving the question of dollar transfers for later negotiations. The United States film industry has an agreement with the Israeli Government which permits free importation of U. S. films, although the U. S. companies have voluntarily agreed to hold the total to 280 films a year. The remittance clause of the agreement fixes the annual figure at $225,000 for out-of-pocket expenses with the remainder of the film earnings subject to certain specified permitted uses.

The Israel Government passed a law in July 1954 requiring all movie showings of 90 minutes or longer in length to include an Israel produced newsreel, and that all exhibitors must show a minimum of 4 hours of other types of Israel produced films each week. Israel has two domestic newsreels companies. Exhibitors are presumably free to schedule the showing of two newsreels—one Israel produced and one foreign—if they so desire.

LEBANON—Import permits are required for motion picture films into Lebanon. Foreign Exchange is available to remit film earnings and no known obstacles exist which discourage entry of United States films.

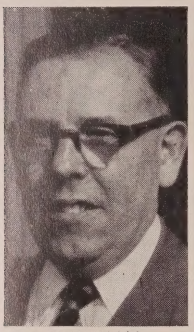
SYRIA—The dissolution of the Syro-Lebanese Customs Union in 1950 created some problems relative to film imports. The Syrian Government issued a decree in 1950 requiring representation in Syria of foreign firms. The result was that Lebanese distributors, who formerly serviced Syria, now sell films directly to Syrian distributors. It is believed that practically all U. S. film companies now have representation in Syria. Foreign exchange for the importation of films is available.

THE MOMENT OF TRUTH

By BERNARD CHARMAN
Editor, The Daily Cinema
LONDON

AS 1957 MERGED INTO 1958 the motion picture industry in the United Kingdom was facing its moment of truth. Proofs had come into its possession that the theatres had suffered their worst slump since World War II.

The evidence was contained in figures published by the Board of Trade, which every three months compiles an official statistical analysis of moviegoing trends, calculated from returns which exhibitors are under obligation to make. According to those for the period from June 30 through September 28, 1957, the record showed:



CHARMAN

Total attendances, 235 million — representing 58 million, or 19.9 per cent, below the comparable figure for the same quarter of 1956;

Gross box office takings, $66½ millions —representing 16.8 per cent below the comparable 1956 quarter;

Number of operative theatres, 4,171—a drop of 206 in 12 months.

Full menace of these alarming figures was the common knowledge that between October and December theatre trends were in some cases even worse than through the preceding months. Calculations showed that for the first time since the wartime boom aggregate attendances for the full year would not reach the 1000 millions figure. Broad estimates suggest that the 1956 gross may not exceed $260 millions, against previous annual highs ranging up to $340 millions and more.

Significant, too, is that the total of active theatres at the end of the year represented a fall-off approaching 600 from an all-time maximum of 4,750. In the top echelons there has been nobody to refute the woeful prophecy of union leader Sir Tom O'Brien that a further 1,000 cinemas were likely to bite the dust. Nor is anybody prepared to gainsay the forecast of the industry's Tax Abolition Committee in its submission to the Treasury that at the present rate of decline total admissions by 1959 may be down to 700,000,000 in the year, or less than half the annual attendances at the optimum post-war period.

The industry's desperate situation has been reflected in innumerable headline articles and stories in national newspapers and magazines. It has spilled over into television, with the BBC putting on a critical survey entitled "Is The Film Industry Dying?"

To the American reader so much of this may seem like the old, old story. It is an echo of the pattern with which observers in the UK and elsewhere became familiar via the US trades and public prints some five years or more ago. And, since television is named as villain in chief, the similarity in design is the more strongly marked.

SEVERAL ELEMENTS

In fact, the position is rather different. The British decline is accounted for by a variety of elements, of which TV is far from being the only one. At this writing, for example, the cinemas—and, stemming from them, the distributors and producers—are still under the burden of a seat tax which siphons off 30 per cent of the box office gross. Their appeal for total abolition in the April Budget is predicated on the argument that (a) the impost is strangling the industry, and (b) the motion picture theatres are the only form of entertainment still taxed in this manner.

Beyond this there have been significant change in the trend of social behaviour and the manner in which leisure money is spent. In recent years the automobile has become virtually every working man's plaything, and, along with a multitude of new attractions (including the universally supported football pools), has taken a bigger share from the popular purse.

On top of all, the credit squeeze imposed by the present government as a check on the country's economic slide, has particularly hit the classes from which the motion picture has always derived substantial support. It is the addition of television to all these elements, rather than the direct competition itself, which has produced so catastrophic a slump in movie-going.

Desperate situations demand desperate remedies, and the industry is now coalescing into a single entity charged with the task of saving it from destruction. Independently, several organizations have come into being to cope with various aspects of the problem. Basically, however, they depend on the same sources for their inspiration and in the broadest sense can be regarded as the same thing.

There is first the All Industry Tax Committee, which is going all out with a demand to the Chancellor of the Exchequer for complete abolition. Its campaign has been supported by an overwhelming mass of evidence demonstrating how impossible it is for the industry to save itself while this toll continues. Top members of the trade are expecting a meeting with the Chancellor and Members of Parliament are being pressurized as never before by exhibitors throughout the UK.

Only the short-sighted few believe that tax abolition will be the end of their troubles. The more realistic majority appreciates that this would only be a prelude to intensive efforts to correct other evils and put the theatres themselves on a more solid and more attractive footing.

BAR SALES

Second move by the industry has been the recent plan to prevent further feature sales to television. To some people this is considered in every way as important as tax abolition and a fundamental issue which must be settled if the cinema is to survive.

The principle adopted by all the trade associations is that, if television requires entertainment material, it must find or produce its own. For producers or distributors to sell pictures, however old, to the cinema's chief competitor, is held by most of them to be tantamount to suicide.

Just how the plan will work is at this writing still under discussion. In general the intention is twofold—(1) a boycott threat to producers or distributors who traffic with TV, and (2) a seat levy estimated to produce £500,000 annually to buy in television rights of old features and so block their sale to television interests. A weakness would seem to be the difficulty, if not impossibility, of restraining TV program contractors from presenting the vast libraries of old American and British features which they already hold.

Third problem is to put the industry and its theatres in order. This is clearly dependent on success in the two previous fields, but is, nevertheless, considered a prerequisite to future prosperity. A first suggestion of this nature came from John Davis, managing director of the Rank Organization, when speaking at the annual convention of the Cinematograph Exhibitors' Association in May, 1957.

Although practical plans in this direction have still to be evolved, an initial step was taken last September by Sir David Griffiths, whose sudden death shortly thereafter deprived the Kinematograph Renters' Society of a fine president and the industry of a wise administrator. He propounded a scheme for an industry board which would be charged with planning its future and strengthening its somewhat wavering relationship with the public and the press.

Now the publicists, through their organization known as the Film Industry Publicity Circle, are submitting similar proposals to the KRS and other associations which would have much the same effect. They are calling for scientific market research, detailed blueprinting of theatre operations and a revival of showmanship at its best.

Thus, as the industry sees it, its future depends on three things—freedom from the seat tax, control of films on television and a new and reinvigorated appeal to the patrons, both potential and actual. The urgency of each and the vital need of success on each front is welding the industry's sections into a unity never before known.

ENGLAND—A SURVEY

ANY SURVEY OF THE UK covering 1957 must be so overshadowed and conditioned by the factors mentioned above that any other comment might seem superfluous. Nevertheless, a number of items of interest might be placed on the record.

Among the most noteworthy has been the development of two "splinter groups" affecting both the production and exhibition sides of the industry. As regards the former, the newly formed Federation of British Film Makers, set up by a bloc of independent producers, in competition with the British Film Producers Association, made solid headway. It gained recognition in the first place from the Board of Trade as a negotiating body and subsequently was brought into membership of the all industry control body known up to then as the Four Trade Associations Committee.

Members of the FBFM parted company with the BFPA claiming that the latter's policy was dominated by producer groups with distributing and exhibiting interests and thus worked against the purely independent film maker. Into this group went Sir Michael Balcon's Ealing films, Roy and John Boulting, Launder & Gilliat, Irving Allen and "Cubby" Broccoli with their Warwick company and several others, notably the MGM-British concern.

In most regards the Federation works in harmony with the Association, and acts in a complementary manner to it. But there are still fundamental differences of opinion, not least in the matter of the agreement to control TV playing of features.

The second "splinter group" is a body known as the Association of Independent

Cinemas. This consists of a substantial number of small independent exhibitors who have split off from the main Cinematograph Exhibitors' Association for reasons very similar to those which caused the breach between the two producer groups. That is to say, the small exhibitors' grievance is that the CEA is dominated by the major circuits with their affiliations with production and distribution.

Led by an aggressive small operator named Harry Mears, who had twice previously been president of the CEA, the new association attracted a considerable number of members in 1957, largely because of the manner in which entertainments tax and television competition were pinching them. One of their principal betes noir is the now statutory production levy, whereby fractional sums are siphoned off seat prices for the benefit of British producers. That well-known scheme is obviously to the liking of integrated bodies, such as the Rank Organisation and Associated British but is shunned by the proprietors of small independent theatres to argue that they can ill afford to pay the subsidy and that they get no benefit from it because the cream of British pictures are squeezed dry before they ever get a bite at them.

This AIC is worth considering because of its belligerence. It never shows itself reluctant to step in where angels fear to tread. It tackles government departments, trade bodies, the television services and others with equal aggression. The sad fact is, however, that it makes very little headway.

Meanwhile, during 1957 and since there have begun preliminary skirmishes over the forthcoming renewal of the Cinematograph Films Act which is chiefly concerned with the screen quota. All the major trade organisations were invited by the Board of Trade to submit recommendations as to possible changes in the law. Most strongly canvassed are recommendations, inspired by the BFPA, for a re-definition of a British film, and, inspired by the trade unions, for reintroduction of the renters' quota compelling distributors to handle a stipulated percentage of British product.

An interesting new thought from the unions is that the screen quota should be based on a permissible percentage of foreign product and not a statutory ratio of British films as has always been the standard in the past. This notion the unions have borrowed from television where there is a "gentleman's agreement" to which both the BBC and the independent TV groups subscribe, limiting the percentage of non-British material to a low figure, something less than twenty per cent. In the view of the unions the foreign film quota would decrease year by year.

A downbeat event of 1957 was the sudden death of Sir David Griffiths, president of the Kinematograph Renters' Society, followed shortly afterwards by that of Fayette W. Allport, who had represented the MPAA in London for 20 years. Griffiths in particular was a sad loss to an industry which at this time needs all the statesmanship available, a quality in which the KRS president was particularly fertile. He contributed greatly to deliberations both on the cinema tax and on television issues and at the time of his death was canvassing general interest in a scheme to establish an all-industry machine for its general betterment.

To fill the presidential vacancy the KRS subsequently invited Sir Arthur W. Jarratt, managing director of British Lion, to take the post. He, too, is regarded as a personality of great experience covering the various sides of the business and one equally acceptable to the diversified interests among the Society's membership. His acceptance caused his resignation from British Lion and substantial changes in that Government controlled distributing set-up.

As managing director the company now has David Kingsley, who formerly held a similar post with the National Film Finance Corp., the Government subsidised body which finds money for independent producers. With him Kingsley now has a team including five major indepedent producers, four of whom are coincidentally key members of the Federation of British Film Makers. Under its reorganisation the company is expected to play a much larger part in the Future development of British production, particularly since its studios at Shepperton, closed for nearly a year for basic repairs, are about to come back into operation.

CENSORSHIP

AN ORGANIZATION established by the trade years ago, the British Board of Film Censors, deals with the censorship of films in Great Britain. It is not a statutory body, and whether a film is accepted or rejected, the final decision rests with the local licensing authorities throughout the country —about 1,000 in number—but almost universal acceptance is given to the decisions and control exercised by the Board, and generally the situation is considered satisfactory.

In connection with the power of local authorities, it should be noted that when a film is rejected by the Board of Film Censors, an application for special review can be made to local authorities, and a few notable instances have occured where the procedure has resulted in local exhibition of the rejected film.

It might be mentioned that there are three grades of certificates issued; "U" relating to a film which has been passed for universal exhibition; "A" is recommended more especially for adult audiences, and under most licensing authorities, children must be accompanied by adults when attending.

The third category, formerly known as "H" (meaning horrific), was replaced in 1951 by a new "X" certificate. This legally limits the showing of pictures so labelled to persons of over 16 years old. Neither an "adults only" or "horrific" classification, it serves for both, but also permits exhibition of sophisticated, adult entertainment, chiefly French, which a grandmotherly Censor Board formerly rejected. The "X" certificate has survived the early danger of being regarded by patrons as the hallmark of lurid entertainment, but has caused concern to American distributors who have found their more brutal pictures put into this group instead of the more acceptable "A" category.

During 1955 a significant change took place in the U. K. trade attitude towards the "X" certificate. Whereas both major circuits had previously denied bookings to films in that category, as being inimical to the family trade, Associated British Cinemas discovered that these pictures give excellent box office results; their second highest gross of 1955 was with a dual bill of two "X" pictures. The Rank chains have since also modified their policy.

EDUCATION

IN 1946 EDUCATION AUTHORITIES and teachers, in conjunction with the Ministry of Education, set up an organization named the National Committee for Visual Aids in Education. One of the Committee's main functions is to collate the views of education authorities, teachers and bodies concerned with education. Other functions include the consideration of the production, assessment and distribution of visual material.

An important link in the organization of production is the Scrutiny Committee, which views the completed film and has the power to accept it on behalf of the National Committee. The Educational Foundation for Visual Aids then receives the film. This organization was set up to ensure the production of the films planned by the National Committee and their distribution throughout the schools. Where local authorities are considering setting up a visual aids library a local joint visual aids committee is usually also set up to advise on the choice of material.

TAXES

IN ADDITION to the national Entertainments Tax which is specific in amount for each price category of tickets, there are income taxes and local rates which are applicable to motion picture theaters.

While not considered in the direct category of taxation there is a special related feature worthy of note under the Sunday Entertainment Act, 1932, which gave local authorities permission to open and regulate cinematograph theaters on Sunday. The local authorities alone have the power to give such permission and it is estimated that nearly 70 per cent of the approximate 5,000 theaters in England are now permitted Sunday opening.

It is provided under this Act that the local authority shall demand from the theater a proportion of the profits for that day, part of which sums collected shall be used for local charitable purposes and another proportion paid into the Cinematograph Fund. Under the direction and control of the Privy Council for the purpose of encouraging the use and development of the cinematograph as a means of entertainment and instruction. Something like nine or 10 thousand pounds sterling is now received into this central fund annually and the principal use for it has been in supporting the British Film Institute, which is active in the promotion of the use of motion pictures for educational purposes.

The amount paid into the national "Cinematograph Fund" is only equal to about five per cent of the total collected by the various local authorities, the balance collected under the Sunday Entertainment Act, 1932, being devoted to local charitable purposes. Last year £438,900 was paid in Sunday tax by theaters.

In order to provide facilities for the troops to see films on Sundays, an emergency law regulation was passed in 1939 whereby, on application from local councils, licenses to open on Sundays were granted to 290 kinemas which ordinarily did not open on that day. The Act empowering this came to an end in February, 1946, but it was open to local councils to put in force the Sunday Entertainments Act of 1932, or apply for a draft order, so that the Sunday opening of kinemas can continue without interruption. Most of the local authorities of areas where Sunday opening was permitted have now applied for permanent powers to grant Sunday opening.

An important point in regard to Sunday kinema performances, was brought into prominence in 1954 by a High Court decision that licensing authorities could impose a condition excluding children under 16. Later it was decided not to ban children under 16.

In 1954 the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association had discussions with officials representing the Secretary of State for Home Affairs, who, although sympathetic, offered little hope of obtaining Parliamentary support for any legislation to amend or modify the 1932 Act.

Early in 1957, debates opened in Parliament in hopes of amending or removing what is widely regarded as an archaic statute.

COPYRIGHT RELATIONS

UNDER BRITISH LAW and practice the interest of the author and producer are fully protected. The ordinary legal reference is the Copyright Act of 1911 as amended. Great Britain entered into copyright relations with the United States on July 1, 1891; extended April 9, 1910; further extended January 1, 1915. Great Britain is a member of the International Copyright Union at Berne. A copyright law now in passage through Parliament will specifically protect motion picture rights for a term of 50 years.

Remittances to America in respect to films before the war were estimated at about £7,000,000 annually. During the war they had been; to October, 1940 — 4.8 millions sterling; 1941—5.7 millions sterling; 1943—26.5 millions; 1944—15.6 millions; for the five months to July, 1945—13.3 millions. Estimated remittance in 1951 under the Anglo-U.S. agreement was between eight and nine million pounds. In 1952-53 and 1953-54 the figure has remained very much the same.

THE RANK GROUP

(In June, 1955, J. Arthur Rank revealed that two years previously he had reorganized the affairs of the private companies which controlled Odeon Cinema Holdings, Ltd., in turn controlling the entire Rank Group, so that control of the voting power of the group is now vested in a company limited by guarantee and without share capital. The right to receive the major part of dividends, etc., from the Group in respect of his own former holdings had been vested in trustees to apply the proceeds for charitable purposes.

The directors of the company and the trustees of the charity comprise Rank and Mrs. Rank, Lord Mackintosh of Halifax, John Davis and Rank's professional advisers. Neither Rank nor Mrs. Rank have retained any financial or voting itnerest in the Group for their personal use.

As a result of this reorganization, according to Rank, the control and operation of the Rank Group will be unaffected by his death, "and the control of the Group is firmly established in British hands for the future.")

CANADA IN REVIEW

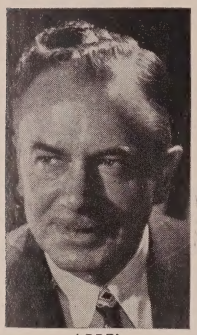
By CLARE J. APPEL

Executive Director, Canadian Motion Picture Distributors Association

TORONTO

THE FORCES OF EXPANSION that have been steadily increasing in the past six years lost some of their power in 1957. Inflationary pressures seem to have eased and the general business trend has levelled out as the year draws to its close.

A small wheat crop is mainly responsible for holding the gross national product to a figure only slightly in excess of last year's record of nearly $30 billions. Lumber exports have been dropping off; base metal shipments have greatly declined in value mainly because of lower prices and demand for copper, nickel, aluminum, oil and wood pulp. Export income has also been affected by the premium on the Canadian dollar which has been around four per cent during the last half of the year. While the premium Canadian dollar has provided problems for producers of goods who compete with importers in the domestic market and made Canadian products more expensive in world markets, there are financial experts here who claim that the long-run environment of a dependable dollar will guarantee the steadiest and most fruitful progress in the country's economy.



APPEL

Capital investment is expected to be lower in 1958, but may be only moderately below the record of $8¾ billions which will probably be reached in 1957.

While conflicting trends have marked the past years and these could continue into 1958, the general opinion of banking interests is that there is no basic weakness in the Canadian economy that warrants pessimism, or a lack of confidence in the future.

The motion picture industry in Canada, however, continues to record a lessening in the number of people attending theatres with its resultant fall-off in receipts. Sixty-nine standard theatres have closed since April 1, 1957 while 21 have re-opened which were previously closed. Exhibitors, generally, are too prone to blame TV for their troubles. That is only true in the case of small towns and obsolete houses which comprise most of the total closings.

The automobile transports thousands of people aimlessly wandering the streets of large cities during theatre hours. Thousands of others are merely looking around shopping centres. It is these people that the theatres must attract inside their doors and this can only be accomplished by good pictures sold to the public by better methods than are presently used. Opinion here is that the methods adopted 25 years ago and which are generally still in use are worn out and create no impact on the public mind.

To examine and prove this fact one has only to compare the amusement page of a large city newspaper of today with those of 25 years ago to get the answer. It is felt that advertising experts should closely examine our main implements of sale—the advance trailer and press book—and endeavour to create a new approach to awaken the interest of the public in motion pictures.

THEATRES

Standard theatres numbering 1,656 were recorded in operation in April, 1957 in the latest edition of a directory compiled by the Canadian Motion Picture Distributors Association. One hundred and six houses had closed, a number of them converted to other purposes during the preceding year.

Theatre admissions continued to show an alarming decline of almost 24 million in 1956 but not as severe as was the drop of over 32 million registered in 1955. These figures are made available in a preliminary report issued by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics on Dec. 10, 1957.

Total net reecipts of all standard theatres in 1956 were $86,692,034, a decline of $6,172,915 from the 1955 figures. The total net receipts from standard and drive-ins combined was $85,886,415, a decline of $6,555,242.

The perecntage drop in receipts for standard theatres in 1956 was 6.8 compared to the 10,6 per cent reported in 1955 which indicates some levelling off in the downward trend of the past few years.

Theatres in the Maritime Provinces of Newfoundland, Prince Edward Island, Nova Scotia and New Brunswick showed the biggest drop in receipts in 1956 mainly due to the first real penetration of TV in that area. Their percentage drop was 15.6, 31.8, 8.3 and 10.2 in the order named above. Manitoba was another badly hit area with a drop of 14 per cent from 1955 figures. Two bright spots in the rather depressing situation were Quebec with a drop of only 1.5 per cent and Ontario receding 5.3 per cent from 1955 receipts.

DRIVE-INS

Two hundred and thirty-four drive-ins were in operation in Canada at the close of the 1957 season. Provincially located, they were as follows: British Columbia 27; Alberta 51; Saskatchewan and Manitoba 44; Ontario 89 and 23 in the Maritime Provinces. None are permitted in Quebec. Drive-ins appear to be holding attendance better than that reported by standard houses. The 232 drive-ins in operation in 1955 had net receipts of $5,367,296 compared with $5,749,623 reached by out-doorers in 1955. It should be noted that weatherwise 1956 was the worst for outdoor attractions in many years.

DISTRIBUTION

Films are distributed from six exchange centres: Saint John; Montreal; Toronto; Winnipeg; Calgary, and Vancouver. Canadian head offices are located in Toronto. The approximate perecntage of receipts of each of the exchange centres, based on theatre receipts, are: Saint John 7.1 per cent, Montreal 25.3, Toronto 38.8, Winnipeg 9.5, Calgary 9.2 and Vancouver 10.1.

SAINT JOHN

Located in New Brunswick, Saint John supplies theatres in the four Maritime Provinces of Nova Scotia, Prince Edward Island, Newfoundland and New Brunswick. Theatre receipts for the four provinces in 1956 were $6,664,258 broken down as follows: New Brunswick $2,158,825, Nova Scotia $3,068,044, Prince Edward Island $273,395 and Newfoundland $1,163,994. Theatres in these four provinces had net receipts of $7,957,733 in 1955, indicating a drop in 1956 of $1,293,475.

MONTREAL

Exchanges in Montreal serve theatres in the predominantly French-speaking province of Quebec where 430 theatres operated in 1956. Total theatre net receipts in that year amounted to $19,187,897 being a drop of $289,052 from 1955. Forty per cent of the 430 theatres in Quebec use all French language films, dubs and native, with another 40 per cent giving equal playing time to French and English dialogue film. Only 20 per cent of the theatres present all English dialogue pictures and these are practically confined to first runs in the larger centres.

Three hundred and ninety-nine theatres were in operation on April 1, 1957. Since that date seven have re-opened and eight others were reported closed indicating the fluctuating conditions that presently exist in exhibition in Canada.

Quebec is the only Canadian province in which theatres are permitted to operate seven days weekly. However, no drive-ins are allowed and children under 16 years of age cannot attend theatres but they do see movies in the many parish halls which have theatrical licenses in the province.

TORONTO

Ontario, the big revenue producer for distributors and the two big theatre chains, Famous Players and Odeon Theatres, continues to record a rapidly changing scene for the industry. In 1956, 434 theatres reported net reecipts of $31,609,194 as against $33,366,109 for 1955, a drop of $1,756,915. Casualties continue high, but many houses have closed only to re-open under new management. Of the 394 theatres reported in operation on April 1, 1957, 28 have since closed and 9, then listed as closed, have reopened. Two new houses were constructed in that period.

WINNIPEG

The exchange centre of Winnipeg serves all the theatres in Manitoba, 29 houses in northwest Ontario and 168 in southern and eastern Saskatchewan. About 40 theatres in this exchange territory have closed in the past year. Manitoba's 143 theatres had net receipts of $3,736,306 in 1956 compared with $4,343,614 in 1955, a decrease of $607,308. Saskatchewan theatres had net receipts of $4,133,177 in 1956, a decline of $375,735 from the 1955 figure.

CALGARY

The Calgary exchanges serve 11 theatres in Eastern British Columbia and 47 in western Saskatchewan because of shipping distances. On April 1, 1957, there were 260 theatres in the serviced area. Net receipts for Alberta theatres only in 1956 were $7,071,146, a drop of $840,533 from the $7,911,679 reported in 1955. The richest province in Canada (residents of 10 years are paid $20.00 per year by the provincial government) is now experiencing an over-production of oil because of the closed market on the U. S. west coast and newly producing wells in Saskatchewan and Manitoba which provide a shorter pipeline through-put to the big Ontario market. It is the last area in Canada to get micro-wave TV transmission and for that reason alone theatre business has not had the severe fall-off in revenue experienced in other sections of the country.

VANCOUVER

A number of theatres have opened and closed in the past two years in the Vancouver exchange area which services 132 theatres in British Columbia. Standard theatres serviced, had net receipts of $8,117,141 in 1956 compared with $8,824,096 in 1955, a recession of $706,955. Thirty-two theatres have closed in B. C. during the past four years.

PROVINCIAL TAXES

Saskatchewan is the only province in Canada that does not have legislation enforcing a tax on theatre admissions. Several cities in that province apply a tax which is generally lower than collected provincially elsewhere. A total ticekt tax of $8,664,458 was collected by Canada's standard theatres in 1956. That figure is $1,463,700 less than the tax collected in 1955. An additional admission tax amounting to $519,638 was derived from drive-in theatres in Canada. There were some lowered adjustments of tax in 1956 by some provinces.

CENSORSHIP

With an increasing number of uncensored films appearing on TV, censorship of theatrical films is regarded by many as discriminatory and an illogical procedure. At $10 each single reel, Quebec exacts the highest fee of all provinces. Collectively, censor boards in Canada take upwards of $325 thousand a year for their dubious roles of protecting the morals of those who attend theatres while having no control over what is presented to young and old in their homes.

1958

Consumer income continued to rise during 1957 though the rate of growth was slower than the year previous. Consumer spending was slowed down but a spurt in spending could be the force that would renew the economic expansion as it did in 1955. Banking interests in Canada, therefore, state that the key to continued growth in 1958 is the level of government and public spending.

Many large projects remain unfinished and subsidiary projects will develop from them so that capital investment will, in 1958, be about the same as in 1957. Further support will be given by easier money conditions which will help smaller companies which have been denied funds for rehabilitation.

There are many powerful forces which must be considered when gaging Canada's future prosperity and calculating investment opportunities. Canada in the past few years has acquired industrial and other facilities which are only now becoming productive and which will find their way into world markets. The utilization of new minerals from Canada's vast oil and mining enterprises could alone spark another era of expansion. Considering these facts, the best financial minds here are of the opinion that there is certainly no basis for the fear of a depression that would seriously affect continuing economic expansion though some soft spots may appear.

Payrolls are increasing which make the the profit-squeeze a basic problem in industry. Latest figures available shows a seven per cent increase in wages and, while unemployment is higher than at any time in the past 10 years, there are more Canadians now at work and earning higher incomes than at any time in history.

The motion picture industry, along with one or two others continues to show a recession in Canada. However, there are a few bright spots. Regular and drive-in theatre receipts for 1956 had slipped back to a total of only $887,974 more than the figure for 1950. However, the large grossing areas of Ontario and Quebec, representing about 63 per cent of the Canadian market, showed a drop of only 5.3 per cent and 1.5 per cent respectively in 1956 against a fall-off of 10.6 per cent and 11.9 per cent in '55. It is believed that the 1957 figures will show a levelling-off in the two provinces with the possibility of a slight improvement in Ontario although the maritimes and prairie provinces may continue to show a decline.

There is every indication that Canadians will continue to live in the tempo of the country's prosperous times. As this is written unprecedented crowds fill the stores in metropolitan cities and will establish an all-time record for retail sales. Shopping areas are teeming with people and autos jam every main artery at all hours of the day and evening. And we close on the theme with which we opened this article—these people are not in front of TV sets. They are potential customers of theatres. It only remains for good pictures, given a new advertising slant, to get some of them back into the habit of attending movies regularly.

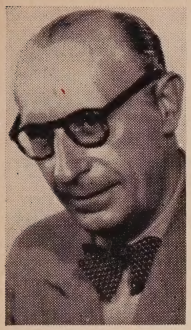
ON AN INTERNATIONAL PLANE

By JACQUES-PIERRE FROGERAIS

President, International Federation of Film Producers Associations

I SHALL PERMIT MYSELF on this occasion to review our past and to make a rapid survey of the present. It was at Venice in September, 1949 that we set forth the bases of our Federation. Even at that time we felt the need to group our efforts and to organize the defense of the international interests of production.

What were the aims of the new organization? They are found stated in detail in Article 2 of our statutes. In accord with this article, the objectives of the Federation are "to represent on an international plane the production of motion picture films as a whole, to protect its general interests, and to favor its developments." As to the first aim, the results we have obtained have been completely favorable.



FROGERAIS

Our Federation is known today to the majority of governments, and it has, as well, a ready audience with the consultive organs created by UNESCO. The Federation is consulted each time that a problem involving the film industry on an international level is posed. Its opinions are solicited and studied as much by the Union of Berne as by the International Literary and Artistic Association.

As to the other aims cited, in intervening directly in the regulation of international festivals, the Federation is conscious of having effectively protected the general interests of production and favored its development. In this field—which I personally studied at length during the past year certain changes have intervened following the recent rise in the number of festivals. At the time of our last meeting of the Council of Administration, we were thus led to reconsider to some degree the problem of festivals and to class them into two categories:

A: Festivals recommended by the Federation, and

B: Festivals recognized by the Federation.

In the case of the first, we recommend formally to all our members to participate in the program, and in the second we leave them free choice to decide themselves whether or not to participate. The majority of festival organizers today believe recognition by the IFFPA indispensable to the success of their manifestation.

TO STUDY

Article 2 of our statutes states that the Federation also has an objective "to study and attempt to solve all juridical, economic, technical, and social problems which, on an international level, interest the production of motion picture films as a whole." This program is particularly vast and ambitious, and here too we have been able to register positive results. Thus, for example, the Federation has had the courage to elaborate and adopt a Producer Charter, which details the rights and obligations of the producer in matters of film creativity, and to define the relations between the producers and the intellectual creators of the work.

In the same order of ideas, our Federation has followed with greatest attention the evolution of the concept of author's rights, most particularly in France, where a law on artistic and literary properties was promulgated during the year. In addition, the different projects concerning those rights termed "neighboring" were also the object of concern to us. The opposition which we have never ceased to manifest against this new juridical creation was crowned with success, for at the last congress of Monte-Carlo it was formally admitted that films be excluded from all agreements relative to neighboring rights.

On the economic level, our Federation has clearly set forth its doctrine and affirmed its attachment to the principle of liberty of exchange and its opposition to any limitaion to contractual freedoms. It was by virtue of this policy that we were led to fight against certain measures applied in Belgium and Switzerland. In the first of these countries, we have, thanks to the understanding of their governments, been able to obtain satisfaction. The solidarity, which is the strength of our organization, has been a great help, and we hope to obtain during the year 1958 satisfactory results in resolving the differences still existing with Switzerland.

OTHER ACCOMPLISHMENTS

It would not be proper to end the list of our accomplishments without noting the creation through our efforts of the International Public Register, operating from Rome, which permits the harmonization of relations between film producers of different countries, the initiation of work on a Federation Yearbook, which will appear shortly, and finally the setting up of a new format of our monthly bulletin, the bridge between our Federation and the world press. At the time of our General Assembly and the meeting of our Council of Administration, my colleagues did me the great honor of approving my actions and offering me their vote of confidence. I thus undertake my new tasks with the firm resolution to continue along the lines of action we have adopted, and with the hope of attaining the objectives we have set for ourselves.

THREE-WAY PROGRESS

By EITEL MONACO

President of ANICA (National Association of the Italian Motion Picture Industry)

ROME

THE PROGRESS of the cinematographic activity in Italy in 1957 presented three conspicuous characteristics:

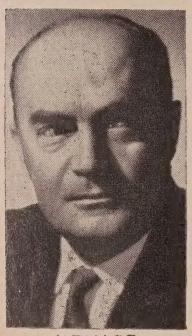
1) —Stationary and partial regression of the number of spectators and of the cash takings in the home market.

2) —The recovery and development of the production of national films in relation to the depression verified in 1956.

3) —Development of the agreements of European cooperation in the framework of the agreement for the common market.

THE HOME MARKET

The increase in the number of spectators and in the cash takings of Italian cinemas consistently registered every year since the end of the war, had the first sign of a halt in 1956. In fact the final data for that year show that 790 millions of tickets were sold, in comparison with 819 millions in 1955, with a decrease of about three per cent. However, a recent slight increase in the average price of tickets being verified, the cash takings present a reduction of a very modest size: in 1956 the cinema halls show a box office taking of 116 milliards of lire, about equal to 180 millions of dollars, with a reduction of about 50 per cent in comparison with the previous year.



MONACO

The final data for 1957 are not yet ready: the provisional data show a further light deflexion in the number of spectators, while the cash takings have remained stationary, in as much as there has been a further light increase in the average price of tickets.

Despite this halt the Italian market remains the most important nowadays in all Continental Europe, for the number of spectators and for the cash takings.

If it is considered that contemporarily the number of cinema halls is annually increased by about 300-500 new constructions, exceeding in total the 15 thousand cinemas active, the average cash takings of the individual cinemas has shown a marked reduction.

The reason for the arrest of the constant increase in the number of spectators is unanimously attributed to the rapid development of television. In fact it is true that the number of television sets installed in private dwellings does not exceed 500 thousand, but it is to be kept in mind that a good 70 thousand public premises (hotels, restaurants, bars, clubs, etc.) are subscribers to the television broadcasts. That is, the cinemas suffer from the competition of television entertainments offered free to the public which frequent the above-mentioned premises.

This competition is even more grave because the cash takings of the cinemas nowadays is the object of a heavy and burdensome taxation. In 1956 of the 116 milliards of lire which represent the gross cash takings of the cinematographic entertainments, a good 32 milliards, that is about 30 per cent, has been deducted by the State for the treasury rights and various taxes on the tickets.

This situation has caused a deterioration in the administration of the cinemas. This deterioration is even more deplorable in as much as it is necessary to recognize that the Italian exhibitors have, in the last few years discharged a great financial strength to give Italy the most modern and well-equipped cinemas.

PRODUCTION

One hundred and forty full-length films began production in 1957, of which 38 were in colour and 56 on panoramic screen. In the same year of 1957, 120 short films have been completed and put in circulation.

These figures show an increase of 15 per cent in comparison with those of the previous year.

The average cost of the films has been markedly reduced in 1957, both for the reduction of joint costs and for the greater number of films of a limited financial undertaking.

In 1956 the cash takings of national films on the home market had reached about 30 per cent of the gross takings of all the cinemas.

In 1957 this percentage has remained more or less the same.

Exports, which in 1956 showed a marked reduction, presented an appreciable improvement in 1957, with over 2500 contracts of transfer of Italian films to 80 counties in every continent, with a net income for the producer of about 12 million dollars.

In 1957 there has also been a marked development of films made in coproduction with European films producers. While there have been only 3 films made with the financial and artistic participation of the North American Industry, a good 50 films have been made in coproduction with other European co-producers. The maximum peak is always marked by Italina-French coproduction films. In the last eight years the considerable number of 250 films have been produced in collaboration between Italy and France: half of these films were shot in France and half in Italy. In 1957 there have also been the experiments for the first three-part coproductions (Italian-French-German). The Italian-Spanish coproduction has also made notable development. An agreement has recently been drawn up between Italy and Yugo-Slavia, for coproduction.

In 1957 the representatives of the cinematographic industry of Italy, France and Germany have constituted a three-part committee to accelerate the process of economical integration of the cinematographic industry of the three countries in the framework of the European common Market treaty which comes into action on January 1st, 1958. All the preliminary studies for the realization of the different stages foreseen in the above-mentioned treaty of the common market have been completed.

Also in 1957 the financial situation presented notable difficulty.

In fact the industry had to complain about the constant deficiency of the cinematographic credit and of the finances, besides the excessive weight of taxes. The industry also met with great difficulty in the distribution. Indeed in consequence of the cessation of activity of a few renting houses, not all the national film industry is able to find an adequate system of distribution, and the Italian branches of the American firms have rented only a very limited number of national films in 1957.

Four hundred documentaries and 450 news-reels have been also produced in 1957.

IMPORT

The importation and distribution of foreign films in 1957 has shown a marked reduction in comparison with previous years. In fact in 1956 only 310 foreign films have been put on the market, compared with 370 in 1955 and 539 films in 1950.

The importation of U.S.A. films always occupies the first place with about 200 films of new edition, which have made 60 per cent of the total cash takings of the market, followed by England with 40 films, France with 30 films, Germany with 20 films, etc.

While the reduction in the number of films of new edition has had a favourable effect on the rendering of the renting of first showings, the excessive inflation of old editions still persists nowadays in our market. From the data published by the S.I.A.E. it is seen that 5850 films are in circulation at present. The excessive number of old production films has notably reduced the average income from the distribution of the films themselves in the existing cinemas in smaller districts.

In relation to the increase of costs and of the heavy taxes on distribution, the financial administration of the independent renting firms presents some difficulty.

THE FUTURE

The predictions for the future progress of the cinematographic entertainment in Italy are tied up with the reception to the repeated petitions presented to the government for a revision of the heavy taxes, with particular reference to the taxes on the tickets, taxes which have become insupportable in consequence of the grave competition given by television programmes in public premises. As far as the national cinematographic production is concerned, the symptoms of recovery which have been verified in 1957 will be able to be consolidated if besides the reception of the aforesaid petitions of a fiscal character, the possibiilty of financial advances will be improved and the agreements in process for coproduction and for international collaboration will be perfected, also for a strengthening of the distribution and the exportation of the national films.

STRIKING THE BALANCE

By GEOFFREDO LOMBARDO
Presdent, Titanus Films
ROME

NINETEEN HUNDRED FIFTY-SEVEN was not a happy year for the Italian exhibitor or distributor. The constant expansion which characterized these areas of the Italian motion picture industry since 1946 came to an abrupt stop. Worry suddenly replaced complacency.

For the motion picture producer, however, the outlook was far brighter than it had been in some time. Italian pictures presented to international festival audiences were receiving the abundant praise we had known in an earlier day. Furthermore, Italian audiences were showing a new and increasing preference for Italian films.

LOMBARDO

In the period from Sept. 1 to Dec. 31, 1957 not only were the receipts of Italian films 20 per cent higher than in the corresponding period the previous year, but an unusual number of Italian motion pictures were sitting comfortably in the top earning brackets. These results can be attributed only to the will, faith, and courage of the Italian producers shown at a time predictions were rife that a total collapse of the entire structure of Italian motion picture production was imminent.

Last year could have been, and should have been, a better year for the producer. It would have been if taxes aimed directly at the motion picture industry had not been so onerous, and if credit had not been so tight and accorded or withheld in keeping with an incomprehensible set of arbitrary rules and judgments.

It is hoped that in 1958 the Italian Government will realize the position in which the motion picture producer finds himself, and will act in accordance with the high position of the industry in the national economy.

In the meantime we must consider the basic problem confronting producers throughout the world, the quality of our product. Our future is predicated on the production of superior motion pictures. With a public taste more varied and more jaded than in days gone by, we dare not turn out mediocre pictures.

Not only does television represent our most serious competition for the time of the audience, it wields a vast cultural influence as well, and in Italy, at least, refines the public taste.

In Italy, especially in those small, remote villages where "the movies" meant a once-a-week presentation of an old, tired film, television has given a sharp new point of reference and comparison. In these situations the mediocre picture suffers in comparison, but the superior film does better than ever.

We know that box office receipts in Italy are off simply because the public, both urban and rural, does not go to see the "average" picture anymore. There are too many attractive ways to spend what once was film-going time. It is clear that we must work harder to make fewer, far better pictures. In Italy we are determined to do exactly that.

One effect of the difficult times we have been passing through has been to the good. The producers remaining in the Italian motion picture industry are, for the most part, the responsible organizations who made most of the best pictures to come out of Italy. We have rid ourselves of the adventurers who, as in any booming activity, flocked around the overflowing cornucopia that was Italian motion picture production.

Today we are able to face the future with greater faith, bending our efforts toward a fuller understanding of our new market.

For this new market condition we Italians, as I have had occasion to say in the past, must produce three distinct types of motion pictures: (1) very low cost productions for the domestic market where they must cover their budgets and show their profits; (2) productions for the vast European market which take advantage of the various co-production agreements to which Italy is a signatory: many of these films will find ready markets outside Europe; (3) productions for the international market, produced in close collaboration with major American companies, and invariably featuring top American stars.

At the moment I feel this last category to be the one upon which we must expend most of our strength and in which we must invest most of our capital. More than ever, with the enormous non-cinema competition our pictures face at home and abroad, our production must have an international character, reflecting as wide a spectrum of thought and social condition as possible.

The Italian producer, in spite of the great difficulties and lack of comprehension in high quarters which are his lot at home, is firmly decided to follow this road.

YEAR OF THE ROOSTER

By GLENN F. IRETON

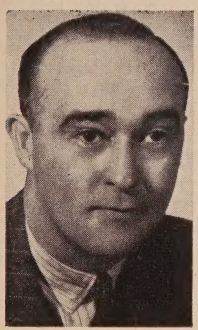
Manager, Far East Bureau, THE FILM DAILY

TOKYO

NINETEEN FIFTY-SEVEN was the Year of the Rooster in Japan, and the Nippon motion picture industry had plenty to crow about:

1. Distribution earnings for domestic product were up 13 per cent—roughly $10 million;
2. Boxoffice revenue increased Y6.1 billion—$17 million;
3. 721 new theatres were built;
4. Admissions increased by 156 million, which, based on a 90 million population, meant that the average moviegoer attended the cinema some 12.8 times (last year, 11).

The only decrease was in features produced—443, down 66 from 509 in 1956, but still Japan would probably aagin lead the world numerically for the second successive year.



IRETON

The start of wide-screen productions in quantity and more color pictures were the two most acceptable reasons for the continued upsweep in returns on domestic pix.

It was also the Year of the Rooster for the foreign segment of the industry—but, in another sense (traditionally, children born in '57 are supposed to be flighty). And, there seemed to be at least a fleeting flightiness when statistics showed import billings of an estimated Y118,214,000 ($328,372). Not that this relatively small decrease was so frightening in itself, but, along with Tokyo roadshow business also down for the year (see below) and "vicious video" just around the corner, it could be that a definite trend was in the making—or so thought some of the mathematical minds.

The 10 MPEA companies released 99 features in the 12 months, independent distributors 86.

The U. S. majors were under '56 by the yen equivalent of about $100,000.

However, it was still a plateau of plenty for foreign product, with the yen equivalent of $31.11 million in billings.

The 12-print-limit on imports (imposed in July, '56) was probably the most serious reason for the slump by foreign pix. More local printing from inter-negatives was being employed to counter the print paucity.

Also, the curtailment of credit in mid-year tightened up spending and supposedly had its effect on income. However, as 1958 was getting under way, the inafltion curbs were being gently relaxed, but a quick check-rein was held at ready-position in case inflationary warnings were again spotted.

The emergence of television as a major threat to the theatrical field did not seem to be fully realized, in spite of the fact that the Ministry of Postal Services licensed 43 new stations for construction in 1958, which will up the total of commercial and government-subsidized outlets to 45 and 23 respectively. As of Dec. 31, 1957, there were 710,000 receivers in operation, with about 40,000 being added monthly.

Japan's six major film companies have bought into two new Tokyo stations scheduled to start some time during the new year.

Two of the U. S. companies staged Far East sales meets in Tokyo during the year and one a Japan conference. U-I's was held in July with the company's vice-president Americo Aboaf presiding. Paramount's, with prexy George Weitner in the chair, took place in October and presented sales and publicity policies for Cecil B. DeMille's "The Ten Commandments." Columbia was host to producer Sam Spiegel and its Nippon sales force to whip up enthusiasm for his "Bridge on the River Kwai."

UNIJAPAN

On the local front, the emergence of Uni-Japan, as a combination governmental-industry organ for promotion of Nippon pix abroad, filled a much-needed gap in the over-all campaign to capture foreign markets. Nagamasa Kawakita is the action man of this trade body (co-managing director with Kyusaku Hori, president of the Nikkatus Corp.).

PERSONNEL CHANGES

There were only a few changes during 1957 in executives of the Japan majors. Among them: Toho director Tadashi Shimizu succeeded the late Fusao Kobayashi as president of Toho on Oct. 5; Kumatoshi Teramoto resigned from Toho due to ill health in December, after serving the company as director in charge of exhibition since 1945.

Personnel changes made during the year in the top echelons of foreign companies included the appointment of Toshishige Ishikawa as Japan general manager for RKO; ditto William Schwartz for Warner Bros., with Jack Dagal upped to Far East supervisor; F. C. Henry was replaced by S. A. Henriksen as Paramount's Far East supervisor; Fred T. Kennedy relieved William Moffet as Nippon head for British Commonwealth Film Corporation; and Geza P. Polaty took over from Milton Schneiderman in early '58 as Nippon general manager for United Artists.

Leo Hochstetter, for two years resident Asian representative for MPEA and headquartered in Tokyo, returned to the U.S. late in the year for reassignment to Europe.

LOCATION PIX

Hollywood features shot in Japan during '57 included Warners' "Sayonara," 20th-Fox's "Stopover Tokyo" and latter's "The Barbarian and the Geisha," which went over into 1958.

ADMISSIONS AND TAXES

Admission prices slid off a little from 1956 on the national average; from Y77.85 (with tax) and Y68.83 (without tax) to Y75.43 (with tax) and Y62.14 (without tax).

There were no changes (originally set in May, 1954) during the year in admission taxes, a sliding scale obtaining according to the prices: Y20-59, 10 per cent, Y60-99, 20 per cent, Y100-169, 30 per cent, Y170-249, 40 per cent and Y250 up, 50 per cent.

DOMESTIC MARKETS

Increases in 1957 were:

Total boxoffice revenue was up Y6.1 billion (from '56 aggregate of Y61.9 billion to Y68 billion); admissions, 156 million (993.8 million to 1.5 billion); domestic product billings, Y3.5 billion—roughly $10 million—(Y23,520,004,007 to Y27,006,066,007, a 13 per cent increase); new theatres, 721 (6,123 to 6,844); revenue from exports (flat-buys only thru Nov. 30, 1957), $60,000 $1.26 million to $1.32 million).

Domestic product decreased by 66 features (from 509 to 443) and admission prices fell off about 3 per cent.

WIDE-SCREEN AND COLOR

Of the 443 domestic features, 84 were in color, 70 wide-screen and 35 of the 154 in both.

A breakdown indicates a ratio of a little less than 2-1 of modern themes over costumers.

Despite the drop of 66 features from the '56 output, it is expected that Japan will again top the world in quantity. During '57, Hollywood is reported as producing 384.

In the short subject field, 187 companies turned out about 800 films, up from 753 the previous year.

At yearend, there were 580 film libraries and audial-visual centers throughout the nation.

FOREIGN FILMS

The foreign film budget for fiscal '57 was $4.5 million for the first half and cut to $3.55 million for the second. As of Oct. 1 (to apply to Sept. remittances), the remittance rates were cut from 25 per cent to 18 per cent and from 22 per cent to 15 per cent. They had been 25 per cent and 22 per cent throughout 1956 and were 19 per cent and 14 per cent in 1955. This fluctuation is determined by foreign currency holdings of Japan. The larger sum in each instance refers to franchise agreements whereby the producers' shares are 60 per cent and more and the smaller percentage when they are less than 60 per cent.

U. S. MAJORS

An early-January (1958) recap of the calendar year earnings for the 10 U.S. majors showed total billings of Y7,466,795,733, off Y41,931,226 ($116,476) from the '56 figure of Y7,508,726,959.

In only five months (Jan., Feb., March, May and Oct.) did the totals exceed those for the previous year.

EIRIN

After several years of negotiating with the American majors, they joined this year (Jan. 1, 1957) the newly constituted Eirin, the Nippon producers' self-censorship authority.

While Eirin does not publicize its work, there have evidently been no cases of serious cutting nor banning of any imports. Fashioned after the Production Code Administration of Hollywood, Eirin seems to be the smoothest operation of any censorship setup in Asia.

BCFC-TOWA DEAL

At the termination of a 2-year arrangement (on March 31, 1957), whereby Columbia had co-distributed British pictures with BCFC, Towa Eiga negotiated a 3-year deal (starting April 1, 1957) with the U.K. firm, which made Towa the largest single dealer in foreign imports, holding 14 non-dollar licenses and sharing 8 with BCFC.

SPAIN IN 1957

MADRID

ALTHOUGH shipment of new American motion pictures to Spain by member companies of the MPEA were embargoed since June, 1955, except for those committed under contracts previously made, Hollywood product given first performances in Madrid during 1957 reached the surprisingly high total of 44.

This is only one less than the total of purely Spanish pictures which were similarly presented in the capital, and seven more than the closest foreign competitor in the Spanish market, Great Britain.

The Spanish industry, however, had the further advantage of 11 co-productions, thus boosting the Spanish picture lead to 56. Nonetheless, the American imports enjoyed substantial numerical and percentage length-of-run leads.

The U.S. imports rang up a total of 1,224 days in Madrid's first runs for a percentage of 26.06 per cent, whereas the domestic films and co-productions combined accounted for 949 days, or 18.64 per cent.

The British industry sent in 37 features which earned 717 days in the first runs for a percentage of 14.08. French imports were less—only 19—but were augmented by 14 French-Italian co-productions. The former had 424 days, the latter 311 days, for a combined percentage of 14.43.

Italian imports totaled 26, while Italian-French co-productions numbered eight. The former played 503 days in the Madrid first runs, the latter 99, for a combined percentage of 11.82.

Eleven German imports were presented here during 1957, remained in the first runs for an aggregate of 281 days for a 5.51 percentage. The number of Mexican imports was 20; they achieved 254 days in the first runs, the percentage being 4.98 per cent.

Four Argentine features managed to get 28 days playing time for a .54 per centage.

Pictures from various other countries totaled 11 for 301 days in the first runs; percentage wise, they accounted for 5.90.

Altogether, the number of features whose exhibition in Spain was authorized during 1957 stood at 296. Of these, 48 were of American origin, 43 were Spanish and 18 others were Spanish co-productions.

Totals for other countries were as follows: French, 35; Italian, 41; English, 33; German, 27; Mexican, 21; Argentine, 15, with 15 others a miscellaneous group.

Spanish film production, in 1957, totaled 63 features and 396 short subjects. Of the features, 43 were made by Spanish companies and 20 were co-productions. Feature breakdown indicated 37 were B&W, 26 color, 48 standard, and 15 super-standard.

Of the 396 shorts, 64 were documentaries, 278 newsreels, and 54 magazines. Of the total, 347 were B&W, 49 color, 385 standard, and 11 super-standard.

Spain maintained 5,800 theatres in 1957, of which 5,000 were permanent installations and 800 were summer theatres.

THE GERMAN SCENE

By GUSTAV GENSCHOW
Staff Correspondent, The Film Daily

BONN

WEST GERMANY IS STILL A CHOICE MARKET for Hollywood pictures. In 1957 American companies exported more than 200 feature films to Germany. No import or transfer restrictions were introduced, despite mounting pressure from the local industry. The Deutschmark remained on the "hard" currency lists, like the U.S. dollar. And the Bonn Government even passed the opportunity of introducing a quota or other restrictions for Hollywood pictures.

What makes the West German market even more attractive is the fact that TV is still in its early days and that movie-going as a habit is still intact. In the latter half of 1957 there were some storm signals indicating the West German market is heading for tough times. But local business in 1957 was still very satisfying for American companies operating in Germany. Their share in the total West German screen time was kept at about 30 per cent despite tough competition from all sides. There were no official figures at press time but it is very likely that the 1957 net transfer to New York was kept at the previous level of about $17,000,000.

GENSCHOW

TAXES

Admission tax, in West Germany was down slightly on the average in 1957. There was a multitude of local tax campaigns resulting in some minor victories. Average admission tax rate is now between 15 and 20 per cent. Rate depends on whether FBL (the censorship agency of the West German Federal States) awards a picture a "valuable" rating. This censorship board has, up to now, not shown any national preference in handing out the tax-saving ratings and there were many Hollywood pictures on the "valuable" lists in 1957.

Nevertheless, the total admission tax take in 1957 amounted to well over $36,000,000 and some $11,000,000 out of the total must be credited to Hollywood product, judging from the 30 per cent American share in the total German screen time.

There were several attempts in 1957, to shift admission taxes from the local community level to Government level, then attack the tax in a concentrated move. But all attempts to press for the introduction of a special subsidy tax to be levied upon all tickets sold. According to the plan, one or two cents per ticket would go into a special subsidy fund comparable to the British Eady Fund. But, as in previous years, the Bonn Government turned down all such plans on grounds they are against the local antitrust legislation.

A new aspect was added in 1957 when German industry toppers brought Italian and French industry leaders into the picture. There was an attempt to convince the West German Government of the necessity for a subsidy tax by a joint French-Italian-German industry delegation. The delegation was to stress the uniformity of subsidies under the European Common Market plan. Although ECM is yet an unsolved problem the Bonn Government made it very clear, in 1957, that it would oppose all uniform-subsidy plans as the latter are contrary to the free-enterprise concept of the Government.

CENSORSHIP

The year 1957 produced a major adverse development in the field of censorship. Children of less than six years of age are now banned entirely from the movies. Young people of seven to 18 years are divided into several age groups for different censorship ratings. Additionally, youngsters are banned from late shows. The latter provision could mean the death blow to all drive-in plans in Germany.

Conservative estimates put the loss in moviegoers at several hundred thousand and specialized children's film producers who have a long tradition in Germany are being driven out of business. While the new German censoring regulations are not meant as a specific measure against American films, Hollywood product is expected to feel the absence of large portions of the young film fans nevertheless. The West German Government, at the end of 1957, made it known that it would oppose all attempts to repeal the new regulations.

TELEVISION

The total of licensed television receivers reached the one-million mark, in 1957. To this total some 500,000 unlicensed sets must be added. This means that there will be well over 2,000,000 television sets in operation in West Germany, in 1958.

Television broadcasting is still handled by public-institution and non-commercial monopoly stations. Some of them started adding commercial daily 30-minute shows to their otherwise non-commercial schedule and more of the rest of the stations are expected to follow suit in 1958.

Programming is at a rather low level, compared with American standards. The majority of the daily program time is made up by joint shows broadcast by all of the stations, uniformly and without giving the viewer a second choice. The number of so-called "Eurovision" hookups increased a multitude of different national European TV systems are participating in these network-type programs.

A television film industry is still non-existent in Germany. There are only eight TV organizations buying filmed program material. Their budgets are very tight and they pay an average of $175 for 1,000 ft. of film. There are all but no serials and schedules are dominated by "spectacular"-type programs rather tan by the regular "slots."

There is one theatrical feature film per week on German TV screens now but product shown is either very old or failed at theatre box offices. No library sales are in sight due to the reluctance of film companies, and the feature film supply is going to run dry, according to TV stations' spokesmen.

Ufa, one of the two largest German film companies, started a TV department in 1957. It is turning out featurettes without name players and without the chance to add substantial profits. Other companies did not copy the idea and Ufa is believed to have embarked on the venture only to establish an early contact with the new medium.

No large Hollywood libraries or well-known TV series have been sold to German TV stations, but there is a strong possibility that the situation may change radically in 1958 or 1959.

A strong industrial group is pressing for the introduction of a second network of TV stations. It would be commercial, privately owned and would be a strong potential buyer of American films. At the start of 1958 chances were that the West German Government would license such a private TV network. Its actual establishment would take some 18 months from there on.

THEATRES

In 1957, the boom in new theatres that lasted for a decade came to an end. The total was at more than 6,500 at the start of 1958 which represents almost double the total immediately after the War. There has been a continuous growth in seating capacity since 1947, paralleled by steadily increasing admissions. In 1957, the total available seating capacity reached a point where the average total of sold tickets was at some 30 per cent of capacity. The low efficiency is mainly credited to tighter competition between more and more theatres.

The admission growth rate slowed down to a mere 2.1 per cent, during the first half of 1957 (compared to close to 10 per cent in the corresponding 1956 period). Due to a multitude of adverse factors the growth may have gone down to zero during the second half of 1957. And there are no better prospects for 1958.

Official movie admission figure for 1956 is at a total of 817,000,000. No official figures are available for 1957 at press time. But Asian flu, a heat wave, a slump in quality standards of local productions and general economic factors are believed to have stopped the 1957 admission total at the 1956 level.

CinemaScope is now a generally accepted process with German exhibitors. There are few possibilities left without anamorphic systems and all of the new theatres are generally fitted with CinemaScope equipment (and with stereophonic sound). CinemaScope theatres in Germany are, almost entirely, dependent on Hollywood films for their new equipment as local German CinemaScope production is at little more than zero. Less than half a dozen houses in larger cities in Germany are equipped for Todd-AO pictures, while Cinerama has yet to make its initial appearance in Germany.

Exhibitors in Germany were hit by inflated costs in 1957 more than ever before. Wages, rentals, heating and a multitude of other items were going up in 1957. This has prompted a strong tendency towards increased admission prices. However, the average admission price was still little over 25 cents and straight increases were noted in only a few selected situations. This yeaf is expected to strengthen the trend.

UFA AND BAVARIA

Nineteen fifty-seven was the first post-war year which saw two of the old "majors," Ufa and Bavaria Filmkunst, back in full operation. While the Ufa organization relied on independent productions and concentrated upon rounding off its theatre chain and its distribution organiaztion, Bavaria Filmkunst started off with a full schedule of its own productions (having no circuit of its own).

While Ufa expected a full commercial success for 1957, Bavaria had to fight to keep its large studio lot busy (capacity, 30 to 35 features, annually). Due to the lack of financial assistance from the Bavarian Government, independents deserted the Bavaria Filmkunst lot in 1957. There are plans to lure them back, in 1958.

Although some court actions are still pending, the existence of Ufa and Bavaria Filmkunst as the two dominating German film concerns is a reality. Formation of the two concerns in 1956 out of the remnants of the old motion picture monopoly came about with full consent of the Bonn Government. Strong ownership ties between the two film concerns have made them the most important force in the West German market. Its full impact is expected to be felt in 1958 or 1959 when Ufa will have a larger number of its own productions.

EUROPEAN COMMON MARKET

Despite growing complaints about foreign competition in the German market, local feature film production was well above the 100 mark in 1957. The 100 occupied nearly half the total available screen time, while some 400 imported pictures had to share the rest.

This situation will be deeply affected by the European Common Market plan which was signed by six European nations in 1957. They were France, Italy, West Germany, Holland, Belgium, Luxembourg.

ECM is planned to remove all inside trade barriers and to set a uniform outside trade policy. This will be accomplished gradually over a period of two to twelve years.

For Hollywood picture exports, ECM's danger looms in the "uniformity" clause. It would mean that the liberal German import policy could be replaced by the more restrictive Italian and French provisions in order to achieve "uniformity." First talks between Italian, French and German industry leaders, in 1957, indicated that there are strong groups endorsing such developments.

On the other hand, the Bonn Government indicated in 1957 that its own concept of ECM would mean establishment of "uniformity" after the more liberal West German formula.

Announcements from trade organizations in the three countries in 1957 indicated that the three industries feel an early establishment of a common European film market is an urgent necessity. More talks are set for 1958 but it is unlikely that Hollywood pictures will run into EMC restrictions in Germany in 1958 although long-range prospects include a strong possibility of trade obstacles.

Fred M. Gronich, MPEA representative in Germany, played an important role in the 1957 decision of the Bonn Government not to terminate the German-American film agreement (no quota on the German side, voluntary ceiling of 200 features annually on the U.S. side) in handling the Bonn negotiations prior to the decision.

PARADOX AND PROSPERITY

By THOMAS L. ROWE

Staff Correspondent, THE FILM DAILY

PARIS

THE FILM YEAR IN FRANCE was one of prosperity and paradox. In spite of the catastrophic plight of the National Treasury, with dollar reserves at a record low, the internal situation of the French film industry was a healthy and prosperous one in almost every department. From production, which registered 142 new pix as against 129 in 1956, to exhibition, which happily counted a three-four per cent attendance rise, the picture was an encouraging one in the film world of 1957, which elsewhere was busy draping the business with black crepe and widow's weeds. Although admittedly enjoying temporary asylum from the omnivorous menace of TV, there were other, more solid reasons for the excellent showing of the industry in France.

Much credit goes to the exhibitors and distributors themselves who, instead of moaning idly by during the early summer slowdown, organized a dynamic industry wide program of film promotion, which they called "The Fortnight of the Film" to tickle a languid public's interest in the movies in general. The shops of the Champs Elysees and the Grand Boulevards participated with window displays, newspapers offered contests and prizes, and a special Salon of the Cinema was opened in the center of town. The results at the box office, while not brilliant, were gratifying nevertheless, but most reassuring was the cooperative spirit of the industry in doing something other than wail about its problems.

Among the other good reasons for the prosperous tone of the year were the hard, earnest efforts of men like Adolphe Trichet, head of the Exhibitors Union, Francois Chavanne of the Producers group, and especially the dynamic and level headed leadership furnished the industry by the youthful Chief of the Centre National de la Cinematographie, Jacques Flaud, and his staff. Faced with the relatively thankless job of heading up the official Government organ, a left-over from the ill-remembered abusive regulation of the occupation period, Flaud turned in a masterful job for the year in eliciting a cohesive and positive effort from the normally super splintered gallic film world, and in extending the good relations and the frontiers of the French film to other nations.

ROWE

When two French groups—or maybe even two Frenchmen—agree on a question, it's always something of a novelty, but everybody here seemed agreed on one point at least; there wasn't too much to complain about in the 1957 period.

Contrary to the previous year, there were no threatened "producers' strikes," no artificial crises precipitated by stoppage or slowdown of Film Aid money, as had been direly predicted, no real shortage of film space for the local product, except perhaps for the usual turkeys that turn up in every year's output. In contrast to England and the U.S.A., there were no wholesale shutdowns of theatres, and, to the contrary, a continuing program of theatre improvement, paid in part by exhibitor slices of the Film Aid funds, is bringing the level of spectator comfort constantly higher.

INDICATIONS

This is all not to say that real problems do not exist for the film industry in France, for at the end of the year, there were some uneasy indications that next year might be tougher. Prices were on their way up again, after an extended period of relative stability. The Mollet Government's battle to hold the price line below a specific cost-of-living index figure was doomed from the beginning, and the breakdown of the barriers loosed a string of nationwide strikes which drove prices upward in the usual spiral. Film could not hope to escape the trend. Production costs were mounting steadily, and whatever advantages foreign producers in France may have expected from the mid-season "devaluation" of the franc from 350 to 420 to $1 were wiped out by the yearend.

One of the most heavily taxed industries in France, the cinema was not entirely spared in the Government's latest tax load shuffling. One of the standard industry complaints here is of the heavy tax load film must carry, while state subsidized TV competition goes almost unassessed; 1957 saw no moves to remedy the situation. The whole industry, including American companies here, feels the weight of ever increasing social charges, which are levied for several years, from ushers to film stars. Lab costs, which were static for several years, also broke through at year's end, when the Government permitted price increases averaging about 20 per cent. Kodak and other raw stock suppliers were also momentarily expecting OK's on price boosts. At mid year, the average production cost of the French film including co-productions, was 114.5 million francs, up three million from last year, but it seems inevitable that next year will see a considerable rise in the figure.

The trend this year was strongly to co-production, with only 81 out of the total of 142 films qualifying as 10 per cent French, as opposed to 90 out of the previous year's 129.

PRICE-FIXING ENDED

In early November, producers and exhibitors won another long battle against government regulation, when the price fixing law on theatre admissions was lifted. The freeze, which has been in effect since the 1952 stabilization program of the Pinay Cabinet, has been widely circumvented by the practice of allowing special admission hikes for special category i.e., big budget pictures. Complete freedom to set their own traffic bearing levels is now allowed first run houses, and the industry at this writing is still anxiously awaiting the results on attendance of the higher admission tags. Definitive statistics are not yet available, but the trend seems toward reduced ticket sales, with overall b.o. takes holding up through the increases.

At the end of the year, the Government also acted to restore the Special Aid Tax and Stamp on admissions below 155 francs, which it had removed in December, 1956. The tax is the source of Film Aid funds, and its deletion last year led to howls from kitty-wise Gallic producers. The Government, however, continued to hand out sugar during the year, by digging into another pocket for it. Next year, film patrons will again be paying for it themselves.

American pix drew about the same as last year on the local market. Statistics showed the French partial to their own product, Gallic films registering a three to four per cent increase. British films also climbed slightly, while Italian films dropped again by four per cent.

ACCORDS RENEWED

Nineteen hundred and fifty-seven was also the year of the renewal of the Franco-American import accords. Pessimistic forecasts were for a cut of from 20 to 30 U.S. pix from the previous quota. The French were also reputedly preparing a long list of special demands, extra taxes on American films to finance French film promotion in America, and similar problem posers. Negotiations between Jacques Flaud and MPEA's Marc Spiegel dragged on through almost seven months, after interruption by Flaud's severe illness and an overly long Cabinet crisis. When the two-year accord was finally signed with the 110 pix per year guaranteed, there was considerable rejoicing in the good-news-hungry American camp.

Under terms of the new agreement, MPEA will distribute all licenses, as in previous years, except for 40 which the French will allocate themselves in 1959 to "those companies who do the most for the French film." Much credit goes to Spiegel for his skillful handling of the negotiations, but at least as large a vote of thanks is due Flaud whose concessions were wholly in the interest of the larger harmony, and showed genuine concern for over all well being of the film industry. Spiegel announced his resignation from the Paris post after the negotiations, to join Hecht-Hill-Lancaster in a VP spot, and the loss is a severe one to MPEA. Leo Hochstettor is due in from Japan to replace him.

Other personnel switches and promotions of the year included Albert Cornfield's promotion to Continental general manager for Fox, Mo Rothman's rise to the same spot at UA, and Herb Banquer's switch from MPEA to UA.

NOT ANXIOUS

On the French side again, although there were some stirrings among the various branches of the industry, by and large, nobody had done much in preparation for the European Common Market bonanza, which was scheduled to become a reality on Jan. 1, 1958. The problem was examined at various congresses and studies were made, but the gordian knot of protectionism and self interest still remained to be cut, and the French didn't seem very anxious at this point to do the snipping.

Paradoxically also, considering the triumphant tone of the year in most aspects of the industry, it was a poor year for the prestige of the French film. The usual number of arty, festival winning pictures were conspicuously absent. French gleanings in international artistic competition were meager indeed, compared with previous years. Robert Bresson won the director kudo at the homeground Cannes fest for "A Condemned Man Has Escaped" with the French also picking up the best national selection (long and short films) prize. At Berlin, the Gallic delegation came away empty handed, and they repeated the unhappy trick later at Venice, except for shorts awards. At Edinburgh, the David O. Selznick Golden Laurels to "If All the Guys in the World" and "Red Balloon" and to Rene Clair personally for his life work helped to salve Gallic pride. Other minor awards came in from Karlovy Vary, San Sebastian, and elsewhere, but the count was not inspiring.

There was real reason for rejoicing, however, in the showings made by Gallic films in foreign markets, especially in the U.S.A. With a take of over $20 million in that market, this was far and away the greatest year ever enjoyed by the French flickers there. The series of socko successes was led by "And God Created Woman," and Brigitte Bardot became a national heroine overnight. Now top sex lure on the international market, along with Sophia Loren and Marilyn Monroe, she has formed her own company with Raoul Levy on a one film a year basis. "Gervaise" also scored heavily in New York playdates. The prospects were so good that at the end of the year, the French were busily plotting the invasion of the Greater American hinterland, with a plan for buying up showcase houses in various key cities.

Disquieting news for the last: the number of television sets has now risen to nearly 750,000, with most of the country now within emitter range. A study of the effects of TV inroads on film attendance in the mining regions of the Northern France, where set sales had shown a considerable increase, showed a proportionately heavy decline in movie attendance. The non-commercial French television continues to operate on a few hours a day schedule, and the artistic level of the programs is hopelessly low, but the Lille region study seemed to demonstrate that even with these handicaps, TV could play hell with the movies. Filmmakers here are worried, but as Jacques Flaud told THE FILM DAILY, the worst is still "five years away." Time to make hay.

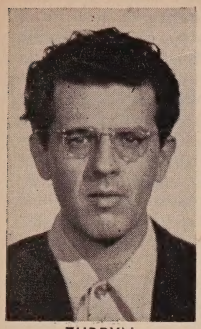
KEY WORD: OPTIMISM

By EMIL ZUBRYN
Film Daily Staff Correspondent

MEXICO CITY

OPTIMISM IS THE KEY WORD for 1958 in the Mexican motion picture industry. All segments of Mexican filmdom believe that 1958 will be the turning point for an industry now 26 years old.

The series of "good news" flashes that touched off the wave of optimism started with approval of 18 Mexican films by the official Film Bank. These are set to go before the cameras the first quarter of 1958. The Film Bank has also approved advances of 8,500,000 pesos ($680,000) for this initial group of 1958 productions.



ZUBRYN

On the production end, the plan is to average around six films a month, for a total of 72 films a year, as has been the case in the past few years.

Figures released by the Mexican Association of Film Producers claimed a total of 96 films made in Mexican studios during 1957, with only four of these Hollywood product. This figure is padded, as is always the case here.

However, a talk with a union official who prefers to remain anonymous does confirm the total number. Except that many of the films going to make up the total are the so-called "long shorts" produced in two weeks, forming part of three or four episode series films. The official "guessed" that feature-length production might be "a few films under the total of last year." (Last year's production was pegged at 75, with an undisclosed number of these also short subjects.)

ABOUT 65

As far as can be ascertained, feature length production may have totaled as much as 65, certainly not more. Therefore, the talk of production of 120 films for 1958 in certain quarters is way out of line. Unless they start grouping television shorts in the movie production tallies.

Mexico's most costly film was made during this year: "Flor de Mayo." This one starred Jack Palance, Pedro Armendariz and Maria Felix and had a budget of 9 million pesos ($720,000).

Total film production was valued at over 100 million pesos (over 8 million dollars) with the Film Bank advancing 56 million pesos ($4,480,000) to producers.

Most important news for the Mexican industry was the fact that there may be from 12 to 15 co-productions with Hollywood producers in the first half of 1958. Film unions have finally quit acting coy and released fee schedules for national acting talent and technicians. This lack of fixed prices had seriously stymied Hollywood production in Mexico in 1957.

Indications that Hollywood may show a greater interest in producing in Mexico is seen in a statement made by Cesar Santos Galindo, owner of the Chrubusco Studios. According to Galindo, a number of Hollywood producers have asked him to increase sound stage facilities at Churubusco. This he is disposed to do since he stated that "at least a dozen Hollywood films will be made in Mexico in 1958." (Galindo speaks of all U.S. productions and not co-productions in this figure.)

With only two studios in existence (Churubusco and San Angel Inn), sound stages are at a premium in Mexico. But to date government officials have nixed all bids for either (1) reopening of old studios (remodernized) or (2) creation of new facilities. The trend here is to produce less Mexican product with accent on quality so that films can be exploited in the international market.

With sound stages in short supply Hollywood producers wanting to shoot films in Mexico have to reserve facilities well in advance. Certain producers were tying up sound stages back in early November for use in late January and February.

80 RELEASES

A total of 80 Mexican films were exhibited in the republic during the year (to end of October), with this 10 higher than in the same period last year. Best months were February and May when 11 national films were exhibited in each month. Indicative of the trend, too, is fact that 20 per cent of the films were in color. This year the color percentage may go as high as 30 per cent.

Mexico's production costs for even black-and-white are going up, with minimums generally around 400,000 ($32,000). This is $12,000 more than minimum figures last year.

IMPORTS HIGH

Foreign film imports totaled 1,560 for the year, with these exhibited in the 2100 plus movie houses throughout the republic roughly on the basis of 50 per cent exhibition time to foreign product and the rest for national. In many cases, and in the neighborhood houses giving three or more features for the price of one admission ticket, the ratio ran more like 80 per cent foreign to 20 per cent domestic in the cities; and a reversal of these figures in the hinterlands.

Of total film imports Hollywood accounted for 85.8 per cent. For years Hollywood has been sending somewhat over 1,000 films a year into Mexico. Other percentages: France, 8.2 per cent (French interests have exclusively tied up the Paris, Prado and Paseo—latter to open shortly—houses to show their product in Mexico City. But outside of the capital exhibition is sporadic and box office take weak except for the sexy, undressed films which seem to go good with the campesinos (farmers) who prudently leave wives and children home). Italy and England (with whom Mexico signed film exchange agreements each account for two per cent of celluloid imports. Spain sends only a few films on an equal exchange basis with Mexico, and this does not amount to one per cent of total. There are also some Argentine and Brazilian imports to round out the lot.

The imported films paid 448,335 pesos ($35,866.80) to the censorship division for "superivsion" with this based on a fee of 100 pesos ($8.00) for each roll of 300 metres.

NEW TECHNIQUE

About the only other worthwhile production trend noted in Mexico this year was the initiation of techniques perfected by Walt Disney where live characters are used with cartoon subjects. The Galindo brothers (Eduardo and Jesus), through their Filmadora Chapultepec, plan to produce a series of seven major full-length features in this category, with Richard Tompkins in charge of technical details. The plan is to exploit the features on a worldwide basis both in the Spanish-language market and in the English language nations.

There has been slight censorship activity except that the authorities have frowned on nudity in Mexican films (but bypass French and Italian epics which rely heavily on showing of acres of female epidermis). Still, Mexico's ready-to-undress girls are not lacking jobs either in films or in personal appearances in theatres a shade above the burlesque level.

Censorship authorities have, however, put a firm foot down on what are termed "pernicious" films which might tend to contribute to the delinquency of minors. All films which show crime, criminals and morbid themes in a good light will not get ready approval in Mexico from now on—this includes foreign as well as domestic product.

RUDE SHOCK

Film moguls received a rude shock when results of a Department of National Economy survey were released covering film attendance. It has always been touted here that films are "the cheapest form of diversion for the masses." But the Bureau of Statistics of the above dependency blew up this smug statement but good.

Based on film admissions, the Bureau report showed that, on an average, a Mexican goes to the movies but four times a year. There were 124,000,000 movie admissions sold during 1957 (up to the final week in December). Divide this by the over 30,000,000 inhabitants, and the result shows four visits to the movies per capita.

Even if the figures which place the moviegoing audience at nine million are correct, this means but 14 visits to movies per person for the year. Industry leaders hold this as a very low ratio and the real reason why production costs cannot be recuperated within the republic.

Still, it should be added here, from personal observation (in cities, towns and outlying villages) that the main occupation of Mexicans seems to be going to the movies. They will show up at four o'clock of an afternoon (when the houses open) with babies and various-aged youngsters in tow, and sit through two performances. Or, in the neighborhood houses, they go in at the same time (with tacos, tortillas and other edibles) and see up to five films (a mixture of Mexican and U.S. oldies) for a peso. They stagger out bleary-eyed around midnight, fully satisfied that they've had their money's worth.

EXPAND MARKETS

Unable to get back production costs in Mexico (with rare exceptions such as the highly touted "Tizoc," "Canasta de Cuentas" and the Cantinflas comedies), Mexican producers are making a determined bid to develop the Central and South American market.

According to Tomas Paredes, general manager of Peliculas Mexicanas de Centroamerica (with offices in Panama, Costa Rica, Nicaragua, El Salvador, Guatemala and Honduras) business was up 2 per cent for Mexican product in the area, despite the troublesome political situation in certain republics.

Mexico admittedly knows it has much to do to woo business in Latin America. But the first diplomatic steps and good will missions, plus a more intelligent publicity and exploitation effort, was begun in the latter half of the year.

While no figures have been released by the official distributorships, there has been a general 20 per cent increase. Most heartening has been the fact that such nations as Venezuela, Peru and Brazil have requested more and more Mexican product. But, while not admitted officially, it is known that Mexican films have been exhibiting at a deficit in at least Cuba, Guatemala and Colombia. The drive now is to make Latin America a major, profitable market for national product.

WIDER U. S. MARKET

And, at the same time, Mexico is casting its eyes hopefully north of the Rio Grande. There have only been tentative efforts, but still the fact is that on major super-productions at least, Mexico will try for wider U.S. distribution, even dubbing in English sound to achieve a better box office take north of the border. And, for the same reason, production trends here more and more will feature twin-language films, with shooting in Spanish and English. This apart from co-productions with Hollywood. Only a handful of Mexican producers are financially able to undertake the costs, but they have shown that they are serious about "internationalizing" the Mexican movie industry.

Producer Jacques Gelman, partner of Mario Moreno (Cantinflas), in discussing some of the ills of the industry, said that Mexican films could be considerably strengthened by a direct government subsidy up to 80 per cent of production costs as is the case in France, Italy, Spain and Argentina. The Film Bank, which gives advances here, makes the loans at bank interest rates and only in cases where it is assured that money will be recuperated.

What has been holding back the Mexican industry, according to Gelman, in its efforts to become internationally important, is the lack of good scripts, acting, directing and technical talent. Gelman was speaking in broad terms of selling the international market. He also decried the lack of exclusive contracts as another industry headache. According to current practice, the National Association of Actors sanctions contracts of one-year duration only. Therefore, a producer who "makes" a star is liable to lose her the following year to a higher bidder.

NO PRICE HIKES

There is still no hope of increased prices for first-run houses in Mexico City. The top is pegged at four pesos (32 cents). Only hope for a higher box office is when Gov. Ernesto Uruchurtu leaves office next year (end of 1958). This minimum entrance precludes the showing of many Hollywood super productions including "The Ten Commandments," "Around the World in 80 Days," etc. Negotiations are still going on to obtain an official okay for a 10 or 12 peso admission for these super-productions, but the chances are slight at this writing.

The mid-July earthquake damaged a considerable number of movie houses, totally destroying three. Now, however, all but 11 houses have reopened and these, chiefly neighborhood theatres, had been fire traps greatly in need of repair, emergency exits, etc.

Raul de Anda, outspoken Mexican director, says that the Mexican industry is at the threshold of a new era of prosperity if it can surmount the blundering, indecisions and problems that have held it back in the past.

Briefly stated, de Anda is against opening of new studio facilities and for lower production totals of truly important productions. Even the "neighborhood program feature" should be of a higher grade than it is today because of the mounting television competition.

COSTS HIGH

The problem of production costs is another major obstacle for now even starlets consider themselevs "stars" and ask elevated salaries. Apart from which the technician's union is always fighting with producers for more and more pay increases.

If all forces of the industry really can get together and pitch in for the common good, then Mexico's film industry can surge ahead to new highs, according to Raul de Anda.

Summing it all up, de Anda goodhumoredly said:

"Exhiibtors want 2,000 films for each movie house; and producers, well, we want 2,000 movie theatres for every film."

Before a real growth can occur, de Anda concluded, it is necessary to "harmonize" these conflicting desires. And the harmonization process has made its timid appearance in the last quarter of 1957. One aspect of it has worked to the detriment of Hollywood interests for, more and more, Mexican producers are winning houses away from American distributorships.

The raids begun in 1957 will be expanded in 1958. For, beyond the shadow of a doubt, Mexico's film industry is determined to obtain more exhibition time for its films in the domestic market. And it is going to make a sustained bid for foreign markets with a series of a dozen super-productions. If the situation warrants it, the monied producers are prepared to spend a million dollars on productions. And this, in pesos, is a lot of money!

A TROUBLED YEAR

By MARY LOUISE BLANCO

Staff Correspondent, The Film Daily

HAVANA

INDUSTRIAL REPORTS hold that Cuba is prosperous, that 1957 has seen new gains in many sectors of the economy, that many new banks have been opened, and that a good sugar crop and high prices underline prosperity. Nevertheless, last year was the worst yet for exhibitors and distributors of motion pictures in Cuba.

And, the future is uncertain. While the president of the Cuban Sugar Stabilization Institute has declared that all Cuba's sugar cane will be milled, and that the armed forces will prevent any interruptions to the harvest, rebel groups are seeking to interrupt the harvest by use of incendiary bombs and other means.

BLANCO

It is impossible to say what it would mean to Cuba's economy if the zafra was interrupted. It is estimated that 42 per cent of Cuba's population with permanent employment is engaged in agriculture. Cuba's exports of sugar and tobacco make up 26 per cent of the gross national products.

Since Gen. Fulgencio Batista seized control of the Government by a military coup on March 10, 1952, the opposition's only point of agreement has been the elimination of President Batista, by sabotage, bombings and outbreaks of violence. The struggle between the revolutionary groups and the Government, with casualties on both sides, goes on behind a thick curtain of censorship. Constitutional guarantees have been put aside, and all newspapers and newsreels censored during last year.

The sabotage aimed at Batista has hurt exhibitors and distributors. Bombings in theatres have caused the deaths of several persons, while others were injured, and considerable property damaged.

While the rebels sometimes phone warnings to theatres, the resulting searches have terrorized audiences, which is precisely the objective—to keep people from amusements. As a result attendance has been falling and 1957 was critical for exhibitors.

The Province most affected has been Oriente, with 1,797,606 population and 104 theatres. For weeks all theatres in Oriente were empty, but exhibitors were forced to keep the houses operating as the Government sought to avoid a "dead" city.

A subsidy of $150,000 was granted exhibitors to alleviate their difficulties and the Cuban Government exempted all film theatres from paying the 2.75 per cent tax on gross income for a period of 90 days. Later the admission tax imposed on all tickets costing $1 was suspended by the Government.

EXHIBITION

Cuban exhibitors would be in a position to enjoy top prosperity, were it not for the political situation. Official statistics indicate there are 579 theatres in the country, of which 322 are equipped for widescreen projection. Cinerama is to open soon at the Radiocentro Theatre, while Todd-AO is being installed in the Rampa for "Around the World in 80 Days." With a population of six million, Cuba is believed in a position to support more theatres than it has.

Average admission price range is from 20 cents to $1. Some second-run houses have recently reduced prices from 60 to 50 cents, while others admit women and children on working days at reduced prices. First-run theatres have maintained their $1 admission, even if they are forced to operate with nearly empty houses.

DISTRIBUTION

Distributors have been hit hard by the political developments. Many of the independent firms some in business for many years, have been forced to cease operations.

Gross income of the nine U. S. companies operating here was $4,002,034 in 1956. Income in the first 1957 quarter was $1,036,477; second quarter, $1,035,608, and third quarter, $736,140.

United States productions maintained their first place in the Cuban market last year. Among the top grossers were "Trapeze," "Giant," "El Bolero de Raquel," "Anastasia," "Written on the Wind," "Battle Hymn," "Tres Mosqueteros y Midio"—Mexican, and "Teahouse of the August Moon."

Features released in 1956 totaled 584, 87 more than in 1956. U. S. imports amounted to 320, 41 more than in 1956. Imports from other countries included: France, 35; Italy, 50; Mexico, 110; Germany, three; England, 34; Spain, 16; Argentina, four; Japan, two; India, two; Greece, two, and Chile, Brazil, Australia, Sweden, and France-Italy one each.

A NEW TAX

The Cuban House has approved a tax bill covering numerous luxury items, and including a levy of five per cent on all film production equipment, 8 and 16 mm. equipment, accessories, and raw stock. Measure is designed to raise $30 million for public works projects.

PRODUCTION

As a result of the political situation and the decrease in theatre attendance, only one Cuban feature was produced in 1957. Two films with U. S. capital were filmed at the Biltmore Studios, plus some TV shorts.

Plans for 1958 include a series of shorts to be made by Manolo Alonzo, a German production to be made at Biltmore by Rialto

Films, and a series of Mexican-Cuban co-productions to be made by Manuel Barbachano Ponce, Mexican producer.

The Film City Studios at Biltmore are under a six-year lease to Octavio Gomez Castro, president of Pelix-Mex Distributing Co., which handles 90 per cent of the Mexican production in Cuba.

CENSORSHIP

All U.S.-made pictures imported last year were approved for showings to adults. Newsreels, both imported and Cuban, and TV films must be submitted to the Ministry of the Interior prior to exhibition. Unwanted material is cut out before exhibition.

YEAR OF SURPRISES

By S. S. PANI

Staff Correspondent, THE FILM DAILY

BOMBAY

THE YEAR 1957 was full of surprises, and the biggest of them all came at the end of December, turning the tide back in favor of American films which, just 10 weeks earlier, had been threatened with near extinction in the Indian market.

As regards Indian films, there was a noticeable and portentuous trend, emphasizing the importance of Madras and the diminishing status of Bombay. Calcutta, which does not believe in making films merely for the box office, covered herself with honors and succeeded in rehabilitating the prestige of "Indian" films,—however undeserved the honor may be with regard to films made in Bombay and Madras —as reflecting the true spirit and culture of India through winning the highest awards both in Europe and the U.S.

PANI

Whatever might be the chimera, politicians and "statesmen" here are hugging to their bosom as benefits and advantages arising out of cozening Russia's cheek, at the time of writing, there are no illusions about Indo-Soviet co-production, although the Indian film press still reports there are overtures from the Russian side.

Patronage for Hollywood films showed marked increase. American films were better patronized than during the previous year as a result of the upper strata of the lower middle class also starting to go and see them, as the meriticiousness of the Indian product, made only with the basest of mercenary motives, appalled them. Pictures made in the new processes like CinemaScope, exhibited in class theatres like the Metro, in Bombay and Calcutta, are attracting phenomenal audiences and there is a sigh of regret in these cities when these films are taken off even when playing to record houses.

In spite of the total ban imposed on import of foreign films into India during three months of the second half of the year and subsequent reduction of quota to 10 per cent, American pictures are estimated to have grossed 15 per cent higher than the previous year.

As regards Indian films, South India and West Bengal report better collections which is, however, no index of the quality of the films exhibited in Madras. Bombay has not done as well as the previous year. Cumulatively, increase in collections is estimated at ten percent which, however, does not mean that this progress will be maintained. The increase is there because a larger number of Tamil pictures were made—and that is all.

CENSORSHIP

There were no major changes in censorship although these are impending. Government has plans for replacing censor boards by the establishment of a statutory body named the Film Bureau, which, in addition to taking over the duties and functions of censors, will also advise producers at the script stage. Legislation for the purposes is being drafted and the Bill is expected to come before Parliament during its session in February, 1958.

Bombay, as is wont, has been agitating as usual for quite novel methods of censoring American films. The contention is, in as much as American pictures are seen by Indian audiences, they should be censored with reference to abstract Indian standards regardless of the fact these pictures, in order that they may be true, should reflect the American way of life. The implication is, not that American films should be sacrificed to iconoclasts but, that Indian films should be made to conform to the Western way of life without the Censors frowning on them.

Particularly with regard to the Bombay product, foreign visitors coming here for the first time, wonder that it is Indian even by a stretch of the term. Actresses and actors wear costumes that are not even remotely Indian and behave in a manner reminiscent of the Negro, described by Carlyle, as hugging two bottles of rum as against the white man's one.

There is also the fact that like Homer, the censors have been nodding, and more frequently. In most cases where they refused to grant certificates to American films, on appeal the Government of India reversed their findings. In the case of Indian films, pictures given "universal" certificates by the Censors were demoted to "A" class,—for "adults only." The most conspicuous example was the Hindi film, "Bhai Bhai," made by A. V. Meyyappa Chettiar of Madras, which was, essentially, glamorization of the Rake's Progress, with emphasis on the pimp and the Scarlet Woman. The picture was a tremendous success and the mischief was put an end to by locking the stable after the horse had been stolen. Another Hindi film, "Paying Guest," was banned after it had been released, as it tended to defame every home which took in paying guests, but subsequently, for virtues which could only be appreciated by the initiated, the film was allowed to be re-exhibited with some cuts.

The Central Board of Censors does recognize that the Code must be rewritten to arm boards with wider and more absolute powers. It is also felt that representation for the trade on advisory panels should no more be given, as these representatives, pressured by "leaders" of the industry, try to influence verdicts.

Censors object principally to sex in its blatant forms and subversive propaganda through films. But here the Indian producer is more than a match and gets away with every transgression. Suggestions, more insidious than indecent exposure, are contrived through song and dialogue with a double meaning. Most leaders, in the political and social spheres, have thundered against the machinations of the Indian producer but they continue to do their damnedest.

In Madras, writers, actors and actresses and producers, belonging to the DK and DMK schools of political philosophy (Dravida Kazhagam and Dravida Munnetra Kazhagam) campaigning for an independent Tamil-speaking State which owes no allegiance to the Indian Union or the Constitution of India are making deliberate use of the feature film for propagation of their Gospel with impunity, with the Censors either powerless or unwilling to interfere.

OUTLOOK

Last year is dead and buried and 1958 presents problems of no uncertain magnitude. A decline must inevitably set in. Contributory causes are many.

First taxation. Uttar Pradesh State has already upgraded entertainments tax steeply and other States are bound to follow suit as responsibility to fulfill projects under the second Five-Year Plan has become, to a great extent, responsibility of individual States. Income-tax evaders, with producers and distributors, stars and exhibitors in this category, will be brought to book mercilessly, as they have been for long enjoying Olympian impunity. There are new taxes like the Wealth Tax and the Expenditure Tax. The chief attraction of film production in India has been the opportunity it gives to build secret hoards that will be gone.

While Calcutta, which believes in making films that are representatively Indian, has been finding new faces, in spite of rooted objections of good families to a film career for their young men and women, Bombay and Madras, where producers believe most emphatically in star value and nothing but star value, has each of them hardly a dozen stars, who are seen, most of them, in every picture manufactured in these cities. These stars have been putting up their prices and some of them hold more than 40 contracts at a time.

During the thirties when Indian films were making real progress, the best artiste got something like a thousand dollars and that was said to be a large amount. Recently there was the case of a Madras producer offering a Bombay artiste nearly half a million rupees for one film—the understanding was Rs. 400,000, out of Rs. 450,000, was to be paid in black money, not to be entered in books on either side. Paying such high fee, no producer could hope to survive and the prudent among them are even now preparing to fold their tents.

There are now linguistic jealousies and controversies and a picture made in one language (Indian) is to look for its revenue from only the Mother State; looking at mounting costs of production, it could never be a business proposition. Insistence by the South, led by C. Rajagopalchariar, the first and last Indian Governor-General, that English shall continue to be the all-India State language and that Hindi should not be elevated to this undeserved humor, backed by West Bengal, has become a live issue which has driven the wedge between the North and the South. Films in Hindi which have been enjoying adventitious importance will, in course of time, in all probability, be boycotted in the South which feels New Delhi is trying to create a new class of serfs in the South to be dominated and bossed over by the Herrenvolk of the north, speaking Hindi.

As against Hindi films, South Indian language films have never had any vogue in the north. This was also the case with Bengali films made in Calcutta, until very recently, when they won international awards.

COPYRIGHT LAW

The third most important reason why Indian films will start declining is that the New Copyright Act, which received the assent of the President on June 4, 1957, becomes law on Jan. 21, 1958. Cinematograph films and gramophone records are also protected by the Act and Hollywood films owned by the Indian subsidiaries of American distributors also enjoy this protection.

And, Dr. K. L. Shrimali, Minister of State in the Ministry of Education and Scientific Research, broadcasting on "The Copyright Act and its Salient Features," on January 17, said, "The Act also makes provision for international copyright. The Central Government has been empowered to extend, by an order, the provisions of the Act first published in any territory outside India in like manner, as if they were first published in India."

Paramount won its case against an Indian producer for infringement of copyright of the film, "Knock on Wood," and it has now become clear that Indian Courts of Law and Justice are in the least prone to countenance such infringements. "Rock 'n' Roll" tunes are the most prolifically copied in India today and one Bombay film in Hindi is known to owe its box office success to such tunes; it is also wispered that protection now available will be made full use of by Hollywood interests.

Those who read leading Bombay newspapers in English will find that they remark on most Bombay films being imitations of Hollywood films, and Madras films, mostly, are bad copies of worse imitations. This treasure house of material will be lost and themes from Indian mythologies have been exploited to the bone. Unless India creates new writers, who could write for films, the one question is, "Where is the material to make a film?"

Then there is the new order which indirectly controls the length of Indian films, and the number of prints that could be made. In the north, it is 12,000 feet and 40 prints; in the South, it is 14,000 feet and 40 prints in the case of some South Indian languages and less in other cases.

Most of the films made in Bombay have never been less than 16 to 17 thousand feet in length while in the South, 18,000 feet has been the minimum while 21,000 feet has been nothing extraordinary. Shooting scripts are rarely written and the film grows as the passing mood makes it. Miracles may be wrought in Indian films but the Indian screenplay writer, who could write a sensible script, within prescribed limits, is yet to be born, and the producer cannot make a film in the usual old way and then trim it down, for then he will not be able to make as many copies as he would like to for "successful exploitation."

BRIGHT FUTURE

American and other foreign films apparently have a bright future. While, towards the end of 1957, import quota for American films was reduced by 90 per cent to 10 per cent, which would have made things impossible at the beginning of the New Year, there were reliable rumours that in terms of a new agreement with the Government of India, in consideration of American production interests agreeing to keep their earnings in India in rupees, the import cut has been lifted; another source says, it has been doubled. Whatever might be the truth, the news is substantially true.

Importing about 200 feature films a year, and free from the menace of pirates, inartistic versions in Indian languages, and indirectly as a result of the new hurdles the Indian product has now to face, American films will have a new year of prosperity the like of which has not been before. The Indian producer is also juggling with possibilities of co-production—he knows the U.S. Department favors it—although he expects his American counterpart to bring meal, he would contribute only chaff; in a few cases something concrete may result, when Hollywood will be entering a rich and new market in India, if only Indian language versions rights are not bartered away for a song, with very rich potentialities.

THEATRES

There are about 3,000 theatres showing films, of which only about 70 are fit to be called by that name. There has been no increase because the film industry is still considered a luxury industry and the second five-year plan has also not taken cognizance of it. While there were no allotments of steel and cement for building theatres, which were scarce commodities, now cement is more plentifully available, but there is no order and it would be available for building cinemas.

With the average seating capacity of 500 per theatre, and allowing for three shows —in the upcountry centres there are only two—, 13.5 million people can see a picture on any given day. The population is about 330 million and allowing for children and the infirm, barely one in forty goes to pictures, not because they are in love with pictures but because they must have some kind of escape.

Both the white collar worker and the industrial labourer, as well as the agriculturist labourer, all have been able to wrest increased emoluments, while they still continue to complain they do not get a living wage and their complaint is understandable. But, the curious fact remains, as against two persons of the higher and upper middle class going to see pictures—mostly American films, 98 per cent of Indian film audiences come from the poor and the lower middle class. The cinema-going habit has become a fixation and the poor man and his wife and his child must see films—witness the long queues waiting in the broiling sun, day after day, to buy admission, which includes women with babes in their arms. Inquiry into the economy of the home of the average Indian has revealed the fact that a family earning 50 cents a day sets apart 20 cents and more for going to cinemas, and nothing can cure them of this habit.

Statistics of annual admissions, even on the State or the language basis, have never been maintained, and will never be maintained although we have a plethora of trade associations and guilds merely interested each in lining the pockets of its members. On a rough computation, taking it reasonably for granted, every theatre was full all the three shows, 4,500 million admissions are estimated to have been sold and the average cost is about eight U. S. cents, per admission, gross. The Ethiopian may change his skin but an Indian film producer will never reveal the true cost of production or revenue of a film. The Indian distributor is notorious for having three sets of daily income statements, one for the producer, one for the income-tax authorities and the last for his own personal information.

With the introduction of a new currency in India, in terms of which an Indian rupee is equal to 100 naya Paisa — plural, naye Pase, and this is, curiously enough, written as nP after the numeral—as against 16 annas of old, with each anna equal to 12 pies, admission rates were enumerated in terms of the new currency. There were arbitrary increases by the trade but governments stepped in to prohibit these increases and permitted only marginal increases for purposes of rounding up to the next highest nP. (South India does not accept the term naya Paisa and calls it either "Kaasu" or "Cent.") This increase has brought in additional revenue, while tickets largely sold through the black market has also been bringing in money not accounted for.

DOMESTIC

As against the 296 the previous year, India made 292 films in 1957, showing a decline of four.

There were 115 films in Hindi against 123 during the previous year. Bengali films maintained their level at 54. Tamil pictures declined from 51 to 45, and of these 45, about seven were dubbed versions of Telugu films. Telugu films showed a remarkable spurt from 27 to 36.

Languagewise, figures of production in 1957, compared with figures for 1956 (in brackets), are as under: Hindi 115 (123); Marathi 14 (13); Gujerati nil (3); Punjabi 2 (nil); Bengali 54 (54); Assamese 3 (3); Oriya 1 (2); Tamil 45 (51); Telugu 36 (27); Kannada 14 (14); Malayalam 7 (5) and Persian 1 (nil).

Even the Sphinx might speak but the Indian producer will never, never reveal the true cost of production of his handiwork. The figure he places before income-tax authorities is always a fabricated one and there are attempts to write off motor cars as production expenses. On the average, the cost of an ordinary film should be about Rs. 60,000, while a Super should cost Rs. 150,000, while a color film should cost Rs. 400,000 at the most.

Quite a number of producers made part of their films in color, especially dance sequences, in Gevacolor, and these did not amount to much as works of photographic art. The only color film worth while talking about made in 1957 was "Mother India," and that was in Technicolor. In a large sense of the term, color made the film.

There was only one picture co-produced and that was between Naya Sansar International, Bombay, and Mosfilms, Moscow, with the picture being "Pardesi" in Hindi. It is said there are English and Russian versions as well, and there are threats of a Tamil (Indian) version as well. Who keeps accounts and the basis of co-production are not known but it is known the Government of India advanced Rs. 200,000 to the Indian partner, returnable before the birth of this year. The India Government also said it was not their policy to finance co-productions. Whether the loan has been repaid is not yet known, but there will be questions when Parliament meets in February.

Possibilities of co-production have improved; there have been offers from Hollywood, while Japan is actively exploring such propositions. There are indications that Japan is very interested in such propositions for the simple reason that, there being no interest in the import of their product here, they should get into the market through co-production at least. Cheap cost is in their favor and Mr. Kido, president of the Japanese Motion Picture Producers Association, is expected to do India very shortly to discuss such matters.

DISTRIBUTION

All the 292 Indian films produced during the year were distributed. About 200 American features are also understood to have been distributed, while actual figures are not available.

Except American and just a handful of British films, no foreign films were distributed or exhibited in this country. Figures relating to revenue are not available at present.

EXHIBITION

India has about 3,000 theatres in all, out of which more than 2,900 show only the domestic product. About 70 theatres show the imported (American) product only, while about 30 show both imported and Indian films. Even those theatres which used to show nothing but the imported product are now making an exception in the case of class Indian films, producers of which attach great value to release of their pictures in such houses for very understandable reasons.

What is the gross income of Indian films and what is the net are things which are not known even to the Gods. Shorts are made by the Films Division of the Government of India, or are made for them, and they alone distribute them, both in India and overseas. These figures would become available only after the budget session of Parliament, in April.

Different systems for levy of entertainments tax are in use in different States, and, as a result of re-orientation of areas on the linguistic basis, there is also the anamoly of there being more than one system in use in one and the same State.

According to the old system which is now going out of use, a prescribed amount was deducted from each admission as tax and, this tax, a big slice of the costlier admissions, always tapered off at the bottom, varying from about 40 per cent to 12½ per cent. The new system provides for levy on a percentage basis, in blocks, and this permits of marginal adjustments in rates of admission. These percentages are also almost the same, but Uttar Pradesh State, for very valid reasons, increased tax rates vary steeply with the trade fulminating against it. Knowledgable circles say it is not so much this increased taxation that is bothering the trade but the appointment of a Commission and the issue of questionnaires on a very wide scale to determine the effect of the impact of Indian films on adolescents, particularly school and college students, that make the trade see red.

Entertainments tax is levied by the respective State governments and are collected through local authority; total collections less expenses are always ploughed back, in proportion to the collections, to the areas of contribution for purposes of providing better amenities in the matter of sanitation, public hygiene and the like. This is the reason why the trade has failed to find sympathy from the public when it started agitating vociferously against the heavy, iniquitous and unjust impost, slurring over the fact that it is the person who sees a picture that pays the tax and not the trade. The fact of the matter is a person spending eight U.S. cents for an admission spends about 50 cents more on transport and refreshments incidentally and just does not mind if a tax of one cent is made into two.

At present the Federal Government does not benefit through this tax but there are proposals under consideration to make this a Central levy in the interests of uniformity, when the States will be given annual subventions, as in the case of income-tax revenue.

FOREIGN PRODUCT

Details are not available. In view of the reported agreement between government of India and MPEA, there is every possibility there will be no remittances from India during 1958 and for two more years. MPEA members, doing business here, are understood to have agreed to retain their rupee-earnings here. To what use they are to be put is not yet known although the indigenous industry is said to be clamouring for such moneys being utilized for the benefit of the Indian industry. Speculation would be profitless but there is absolutely no chance of the American producer being penalized for the benefit of the Indian "fillum-maker."

To conclude, 1958 has dawned as a year of hope for the American product while the end of 1957 would almost have meant the extinction of American pictures in India. The people of India, in her towns and villages, have always been anxious to see American films and, if possible, their Indian language counterparts. To what extent such hopes will be realized still remains to be seen for the shape of things to come has not yet emerged, even in profile.

TELEVISION—FREE OR FEE?

By MANDEL HERBSTMAN

Staff Writer, THE FILM DAILY

THE ONE DOMINANT QUESTION that preoccupied the industry during the year was: Television—Free or Fee? The discussion, pro and con, was briskly fanned into heated controversy on Sept. 18 by the announced decision of the Federal Communications Commission to authorize a three-year experimental trial-period for toll TV, with permits to be considered starting March 1, 1958.

Along with pay TV as the wave of the future, magnetic tape recorders for color programs seemed close at hand.

HERBSTMAN

But toll TV was not the only headline making event of the year. Universal Pictures broke into the news with the release of a pre-1948 backlog of some 600 features to TV. Distribution of the films went to Columbia Pictures' subsidiary, Screen Gems.

In the opening phase of the new year, Paramount Pictures sold its pre-1948 backlog to TV. It was the last of the motion picture companies with a film backlog that was not committed to TV. Rights to the entire Paramount backlog of 750 pictures went to Management Corp. of America, a subsidiary of Music Corp. of America, for $35,000,000 with provision for an additional $15,000,000 later.

Meanwhile Paramount was busy on another front of innovation, that of its own toll TV system, pushed by its subsidiary, International Telemeter Corp.

The event that touched off far-reaching reactions happened in the little Oklahoma town of Bartlesville on Sept. 3 when Telemovies made their debut. Motion pictures were shown in subscribers' houses via wired TV, with some 150 homes receiving top quality films with no charge for the first month. The Telemovie System marked the first installation of the cable theatre closed circuit TV concept, engineered and manufactured by the Jerrold Electronics Corp. of Philadelphia. Opening pictures were "Pajama Game" and "River Gambler."

The trend from live to filmed shows continued during the year, as well as the movement, started earlier, of production centers from East to West coast.

Program-wise there were no outstanding new faces, or programs of striking imagination and sustained success. TV critics repeatedly pointed out this general lack of freshness and new ideas. Westerns galloped across the TV screen in greater number than before, and the indications were that they would continue in force this year.

As the year closed, more people were watching TV than ever before. With a reported 493 commercial stations on the air at the close of 1957, some 42,000,000 families were watching TV, according to Nielson. More than 47,000,000 sets were in use throughout the U.S. as some 5,000,000 homes were equipped with two or more receivers.

Cameras were grinding busily in Hollywood as the New Year was ushered in. The preponderance of filming was for TV. While 11 theatrical pictures were before the cameras during the first week, there were some 67 movies, mostly of the 30-minute variety, being made for TV.

The year opened to the talk of recession, but heads of principal agencies and networks felt otherwise. Statements were marked with optimism. Media heads checked reported no cut-backs in their broadcast budgets.

Net revenue and sales for the Columbia Broadcasting System for 1957 totaled $385,400,000 a jump of 8.6 per cent over the previous year, according to the annual stock holders report. Consolidated net income was $22,193,400 for the year ended December 1957, compared with $16,283,500 recorded in 1956.

Of the American Broadcasting-Paramount Theatres, Inc., record gross income of $215,877,000 for 1957, income from the ABC division was $109,393,000 as against $98,759,000 in 1956, Leonard Goldenson informed his stockholders.

Although figures were not available from NBC-TV, at the year end it had attained the highest level of sponsored time and gross billing in its history.

A word that was given new currency in TV circles was "subliminal." All three networks issued directives saying they would not accept or present subliminal advertising. Subliminal advertising still in its experimental stage, is the method of flashing commercial messages so briefly that the viewer is not conscious of seeing them.

The Television Code Review Board of the National Association of Broadcasters proposed that "subliminal perception" process should not be permitted to transmit information of any kind on TV. Many regional legislatures were taking measures against it.
